DEFENSE MOVES TO STRIKE MOST DAMAGING TESTIMONY

PRESIDENT SENDS LIND INTO MEXICO TO GET THE FACTS

He Will Impartially Investigate All Angles of Situation and on His Report the President Probably Will Act

EXTRAORDINARY TRIP, WITHOUT A PRECEDENT

But the Situation Is Extraordinary and President Wants Lind to Get in Touch With All Clashing Elements

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 5.—The selection of John Lind, ex-governor of Minnesota, to represent the president of the United States in Mexico means that the Wilson administration recognizes the intolerable condition of affairs in that republic and proposes to find and administer the remedy.

This is stated on authority which may not be questioned. Mr. Lind has been clothed with extraordinary powers. He will meet all the clashing interests in Mexico. He will learn their differences. He will ascertain what steps, if any, can be used to reconcile them. He will report fairly, impartially and truthfully to President Wilson, and when, finally, this part of his work is completed, it is promised that the president will take the people of the United States fully into his confidence.

SPECULATION IDLE.

Until John Lind has had time to do his task it will be idle to speculate as to the result of his mission. The president himself does not assume to know at this time the direction to be taken by the efforts of the government of the United States. He does know that certain of the leading business men of Mexico have made representations to him which indicate one possible peaceful solution. He knows other interests, not dominated by Mexicans, have attempted to bring about intervention by the United States and that still other interests, Mexican, have worked in the same direction. Of course, the president also knows all about the attempt to secure recognition of the Huerta government by the United States. Those efforts are public property.

But when John Lind gets through the president will expect to have all the facts in regard to every angle of the Mexican situation. He will have the truth about the way Huerta became president as well as the moral aspect of those who are trying to unhorse Huerta. When he has all these facts he will then decide whether he will attempt mediation or intervention; and it may be that he will then have such light as will make just and expedient the official recognition of the Huerta government. This last is not expected at this time, because the president does not believe from what he knows that it can be justified. But he does not propose to turn his back even upon that, if John Lind finds the president's present information to be erroneous.

AN UNPRECEDENTED TRIP.

Sending Lind to Mexico is an unprecedented step. There is no such office as that under which Lind is acting. But the situation is an extraordinary one. The president feels he must get into touch with all the clashing elements in Mexico. He could not do this by sending an ambassador to Huerta, were he willing thus to recognize Huerta, for that would shut the door against all conferences with those opposed to Huerta. As it is, he expects to compel Huerta to recognize Lind without having Lind officially recognize Huerta. This will open the way for Lind to approach every element in Mexico, and open the road for mediation and the peaceful restoration of government and order if that can be accomplished by peaceful means.

WILL TELL THE PEOPLE.

At the proper time the president will give the people of the United States all the information he has collected through Lind and his other agencies. He does not expect to take any vital step while the American public is in the dark. But what he desires to guard against is premature explosions, hysterics and other forms of dementia due to manufactured and unreasonable excitement. He selected Lind because he is calm, cool, level-headed and without prejudice, yet fair and just. He proposes to keep calm himself and he hopes the people will show their confidence in him by doing likewise.

If the United States has to settle the Mexican trouble he wants to feel that it has been done with no injustice toward anybody and without grinding any particular axe. The president's hopes are high that a way to mediate the matter can be found. He believes the best people of Mexico are with him in this. But he does not propose to adopt any plan or method until John Lind has carried out the task assigned to him.

Constitutional Government Favored by President

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—No announcement of policy or further steps will be taken by President Wilson in the Mexican situation until former Governor John Lind, of Minnesota, personal representative of the president, arrives in Mexico City and familiarizes himself with conditions there.

Mr. Lind carries instructions to talk informally with prominent Mexicans. Administration officials indicated that the steps toward a mediation policy attempted until after Mr. sounded out sentiment in determined whether the assistance of the United States in adjusting th edispute would be received. Mr. Lind will inform inquirers, on authority of President Wilson that

SAYS COMMITTEE WENT TOO FAR ON TEMPERANCE BILL

Resolution of Representative Kidd Charges Temperance Committee With "Usurpation of Its Power"

WANTED SEARCY-HIXON BILL READ THIS YEAR

Action of Committee in Blocking Action on Bill for This Session Defended by Representative Wohlwender

A resolution was introduced in the house by Representative Kidd, of Baker, Tuesday morning charging the house committee on temperance with usurpation of power, affecting the rights, dignity and integrity of its members through its action on the Searcy-Hixon bill of the senate.

The resolution, which was introduced just prior to the taking up of the automobile tax will which was carried over from Monday, being in the nature of a privileged measure, had the right of way over all other matter. It was not taken as such when first read and ordered to lie on the desk for the day. Representative Hopkins, of Thomas, however, called the chair's attention to its nature and it was accordingly ruled that the matter be taken up for immediate consideration.

Mr. Kidd insisted that the temperance committee had taken arbitrary action in referring a bill that had been passed by the senate to a sub-committee of three to report at the next session of the legislature, and demanded in his resolution that the whole committee report the bill back to the house Wednesday morning whether favorably or not.

There was every indication that the majority of the members resented the wording of the resolution and the attack on the temperance committee.

HOLDS FLOOR OVER HOUR.

The first indication of a "filibuster" came when Representative Wohlwender, of Muscogee, took the floor, shortly after 11:30, and held it successfully until the set hour of adjournment at 1 o'clock.

The speaker called attention to the fact that the committee had acted in the best interests of all parties concerned, in that they awaited certain decisions by the supreme court of the United States affecting the constitutionality of the Webb law before reaching a decision.

He recited instances where other committees had held up bills where the question of constitutionality was involved, and declared that no such effort had been made to force these committees to report and no such charges had been made against them in view of certain inactivities.

Mr. Wohlwender declared that the house should not submit to the demands of the resolution but vote it down to show their faith in the integrity and ability of the temperance committee.

In the course of his address, Mr. Wohlwender was asked how long he expected to keep the floor. "Until adjournment and then some," shouted the gentleman from Muscogee.

"I will now read the resolution of the gentleman from Baker, Mr. Kidd," and he did, keeping on reading despite interruptions until the hour of adjournment arrived.

KEEPS FLOOR.

Under the rules of the house Mr. Wohlwender still has the floor of the assembly when it convenes and at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon is expected to continue his reading of the resolution.

Owing to the row earlier in the morning over amendments to the report of the rules committee and the fillbuster against the Kidd resolution, none of the administration measures amendatory to the general tax act were taken up, nor can they be reached until a vote is taken on the question now before the house.

SEVENTEEN ARE HURT IN WRECK ON CENTRAL ROAD

Defective Rail Causes Smash-up Near Savannah—None Fatally Injured

(By Associated Press.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 5.—Seventeen persons are reported to have been injured, none of them, it is believed, fatally, when passenger train No. 4, running from Washington to Savannah, was derailed at Oliver, Ga., fifty miles north of here today. A defective rail is reported to have been the cause o fthe wreck.

The most seriously injured are S. L. Stephens, Atlanta, express messenger, scalp wound; Ernest Morrow, baggagemaster, Atlanta, sprained back, and Mail Clerk Ashley, of Atlanta, whose right hand was smashed. Twelve colored passengers were cut by flying glass, but none of them were seriously injured.

The wreck was caused by a defect in the running gear of the express car. This went off first and when the engineer saw that there was trouble he applied the emergency brakes and this threw many people from their seats.

All the passengers reached Savannah about 1 o'clock this afternoon on a special train.

ANOTHER SHOOTING IN N. Y. A LA HERMAN ROSENTHAL

Gunmen Shoot Victim in Coffee House and Escape in Auto

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—William Lustig, a young man of whom the police know little except that he comes from a respectable family and who has a brother who is a process server attached to the district attorney's office, is dying in Bellevue hospital today, the victim of assassins, whose work recalls the gunmen's methods in the Herman Rosenthal murder more than a year ago.

Lustig is believed to have been lured to "Humpty" Jackson's coffee house by a woman last night. The couple had just taken a seat at a table when the woman suddenly left and Lustig started after her. He found his exit barred by four men, with revolvers gleaming. They all fired and three of the four shots took effect.

A big black touring car, whose motor was being started just as the shooting occurred, provided means of escape for the gunmen and they were speeding away before the policemen on nearby posts could reach the scene. The gunmen threw their revolvers into the street. The police have no clue to the identity of the men nor any knowledge of what led up to the mysterious shooting.

LAWYERS ON BOTH SIDES SATISFIED WITH CONLEY

"They Haven't Shaken Him a Particle," Says Dorsey—"He Has Told About 240 Lies Already," Declares Attorney Reuben R. Arnold

Both the state's attorneys and the counsel for Leo M. Frank Tuesday at noon expressed satisfaction with the progress of the cross-examination of James Conley, the negro sweeper. The negro had been on the stand then for more than nine hours, during eight hours of which he had undergone a strenuous grilling at the hands of Attorney L. Z. Rosser.

"They have not shaken him a particle," declared Solicitor Dorsey, "and that isn't all. I don't believe they will be able to do so." Attorney Frank A. Hooper, who is assisting Mr. Dorsey in the prosecution of Frank, said: "Mr. Rosser will go ahead and wear himself out, and Attorney Arnold will hurl questions at Conley until he, too, grows weary, and when it is all over the negro will still be there ready for more."

Mr. Rosser was confident that he had made great headway in discredited Conley's testimony. He smilingly commented upon how he had tangled up the negro when he got him away from his recited story, but said that when Conley got back into his well-drilled tale he ran along like a piece of well-oiled machinery. "I've caught him in a mass of lies," asserted Mr. Rosser.

"Conley has lied both specifically and generally," declared Reuben Arnold. "He has lied about material things and he has lied about immaterial things. He has told about 240 lies since he has been under cross-examination. I kept tab on him until he had told over 200 lies, and then they came so fast I couldn't keep up with him."

LIVELY TILT IN SENATE ON CURRENCY QUESTION

Senator Hoke Smith Forces Senator Owen Off the Floor

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The first skirmish over currency legislation in the seate today served to accentuate the division among Democrats. Senator Owen, chairman of the banking committee and sponsor for the administration bill in the upper chamber, was forced off the floor by Senator Hoke Smith, also a Democrat, while he was attempting to reply to an attack on immediate legislation delivered by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, another Democrat. Senator Smith's point of order, that the tariff and not currency was before the senate, forced Senator Owen to yield, but he announced he would reply to Senator Hitchcock's speech later.

ON GROUNDS OF IRRELEVANCY ATTORNEY ARNOLD MOVES TO STRIKE PART OF TESTIMONY

He Asks That Conley's Statement That He Acted as "Lookout" for Frank, and Part of Testimony Attacking Frank's Personal Character Be Blotted From Record — Attorney Hooper eDclares Defense Has Waited Too Long to Enter Objection

MYSTERIOUS "MR. DALTON" MENTIONED BY CONLEY MAY BE CALLED BY SOLICITOR TO CORROBORATE NEGRO

It Is Said That Dalton Is Within Reach of State—With Conley Still Under Cross-Examination and Other State Witnesses, Including Dr. Harris, Yet to Be Heard, Indications Are Tuesday That Trial Will Last Three Weeks, if Not Longer

Attorney Arnold entered the court about two minutes late. Mr. Rosser had not arrived. Mr. Arnod asked that the jury be sent out, and stated that he had several motions to make. The jury went out. The first, he said, was a motion to exclude certain testimony from the record on the ground that it was wholly irrevelant, incompetent and inadmissable. Mr. Arnold held a long typewritten document in his hands.

"We move, first," he said, "to exclude from the record all the testimony of Conley relative to watching for the defendant, and we withdraw our cross examination on that subject.

"Second, Mr. Arnold moved that a portion of the negro's testimony attacking Frank's character, which was brought out through questions propounded by the solicitor be ruled out.."

When a recess was ordered in the Frank trial Tuesday at 12 o'clock, Jim Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Pencil factory had been cross examination for eight hours. Beyond showing to the jury that Conley had been arrested seven times since his employment at the pencil factory, that the negro had lied in the several affidavits given by him to the police, and that by his own admission he had drunk a mixture of wine and beer on the morning of the Saturday that Mary Phagan was murdered, Luther Z. Rosser had made little progress towards breaking down the negro at the hour of adjournment.

Conley was free to admit in answer to the attorneys rapid fire of questions that he had not told the whole truth in the statements and affidavits made by him some weeks ago. The only explanation he gave was that he was not ready to tell it all at the time he made these statements and that he was "holding back some of it." When, however, Mr. Rosser approached the negro's story as related on the stand Monday, he doggedly declared that he had told the truth. Questions hurled at him with a view to trapping him were without effect, for each time the negro was ready with an adroit reply.

It is believed that Conley will be under cross-examination during the rest of the afternoon, and possibly again Wednesday morning. When court adjourned late Monday, Attorney Reuben R. Arnold announced that the negro's examination was not half over, and it seems certain that the defense will exhaust every effort to break down the negro and secure from him admissions that the sensational story told by him on Monday is a fabrication.

The mysterious "Mr. Dalton" mentioned in the testimony by Jim Conley Monday as having made visits to the National Pencil factory in company with women who came there to see Leo M. Frank, the accused factory superintendent, has been located it is said, and it was rumored in the court room Tuesday that Solicitor Dorsey would put him on the stand to corroborate portions of Conley's testimony.

A tablet of strychnine was given to the negro witness about 11 o'clock to prevent him from falling under the strain of Attorney Rosser's questions. The negro at the time had shown no signs of weakness, but owing to his long confinement without exercise it was feared that the strain might prove too much for him to stand.

NO WOMEN ALLOWED.

At 8:40 o'clock Tuesday morning, when the doors were opened for the public to enter the court room, some 400 people were in the long single column of applicants for admission. Many of them had been there since 6 o'clock. About 250 were admitted, filling the court. Then the doors were shut. No women were allowed to enter.

Leo M. Frank, the accused, arrived at the court house about 8:40 o'clock, accompanied by Sheriff Mangum. James Conley, his negro accuser, arrived a few moments later in custody of a deputy sheriff, having spent the night incommunicado in the county jail. The negro was taken into the court room. Shortly afterward the defendant, Frank, his wife, his mother and his father-in-law, Emil Selig, entered court and gazed constantly at the negro, looking him out of countenance. His eyes evaded theirs. Judge Roan arrived several minutes before court was due to convene. The jury was there.

Attorney Rosser resumed the cross-examination of Conley immediately after court convened.

The attorney questioned the negro minutely with reference to the witness' examination by detectives on May 22.

"When you talked to Black and Scott on Saturday, you told them that you wrote the notes on Friday, didn't you?"

"I don't remember the day, but I did tell them that."

"It was ont true, was it?"

"No, sir, it was not true."

CAN'T REMEMBER.

The negro couldn't remember anything more about that particular conversation. Attorney Rosser asked:

"They tried their best on May 27 to get you to make a change, didn't they?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't they tell you it wouldn't do—that it wouldn't fit in?"

"No, sir, they just asked me if that was all."

The negro couldn't remember the day of the week when that conversation took place, nor the day of the month.

"Well, on May 28, Scott and Lanford talked to you for four hours, didn't they?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, at any rate, didn't they stick to you closer than brothers?"

The negro made no answer.

"Didn't they call attention to parts of your statement that didn't sound right?"

"Not to me."

"Well, what were they talking about all those hours?"

"They were talking about what I was talking about."

"What did you say to them, Jim?"

Attorney Rosser was referring to a book of typewritten pages while he questioned the negro.

TELLS ROSSER TO EXPLAIN IT.

"You go on and explain it," answered the negro. "I can't remember. You've got the book."

"Mr. Black talked to you a lot, didn't he? And Mr. Lanford?"

"Mr. Black talked to me a good deal and Mr. Lanford a little."

Attorney Rosser continued to ask Conley about the third statement, made May 28.

"In this stament, Jim, you changed

GOODS WORTH MILLIONS WAITING ON NEW TARIFF

Bonded Warehouses Hold Stuff Valued at $105,928,884. Two-Thirds in New York

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Bonded warehouses at various ports in the United States are fairly bursting with the great stocks of foodstuffs and merchandise, awaiting withdrawal by their owners. The fact is set forth in a statement today by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, which declares that goods to the value of $105,928,884 were in the warehouses June 30 last, as against stocks to the value of $72,246,-878 on June 30, 1912. Two-thirds of the treasure is in the government's possession in the port of New York.

Sugar, leaf tobacco and raw wool make up a heavy part of the stores. Chemicals, manufactures of fiber (chiefly burlaps and linens), manufacturers of silk, fruit and nuts and manufacturers of iron and steel also are heavily represented. The approaching enactment of tariff legislation by congress is held responsible for the great stocks on hand.

"The value of imported merchandise in bonded warehouses at the present time," says the bureau's statement, "is more than double that in warehouses immediately prior to the enactment of the tariff laws of 1890 and 1894, five times greater than in 1897 and about 29 per cent larger than in 1909."

MONEY BILL PASSED AFTER $280,000 CUT

Warm Fight Over Pension Fund Marks Approving of General Appropriations

The state senate Tuesday morning passed the general appropriations bill of the house, after first cutting off $280,000, the excess of the revenue expected for next year. Three senators voted against the bill.

It will be sent back to the house and will probably be considerably changed there before it is finally returned to the senate.

The bill, with the exception of several minor points, was passed just as recommended by the appropriations committee of the senate. The amount cut was from the high schools, colleges and common school fund, and from the pension list.

The fight Tuesday morning resolved around the pensions appropriations, which had been cut from $385,000 on one roll to $316,000, by the committee amendment. During the discussion Senator W. D. McNell, of the Twenty-second, declared that the pension rolls had increased instead of decreased since the war, and that on them were many frauds which the state had no power to detect on account of the present law. The committeee amndment was passed.

The battle began when Senator Peyton offered an amendment to raise the pension fund to $465,000. In support of this amendment Senator Tarver declared that the commissioner of pensions had told him that the state must have $150,000 more than was recommended by the committee.

Senator McNell then spoke. He said that the pension rolls are at present crowded with frauds, and producing statistics, quoted them to the effect that the number of the rolls had drawn sums amounting to but $70.000 in the eighties and were now drawing millions.

"I wish to go on record," declared Senator McNell, "As desiring to pay every deserving Confederate soldier not only a puttance which the pension provides, but a sum commensurate with his needs. But thre is no disputing the fact that many are drawing pensions whose claims are bogus, and these claims, moreover, cannot be refuted because of the law, or rather, lack of law. According to statistics, there are more Confederate veterans now than there were at the close of the war. I am not impugning our commissioner of pensions, but he is powerless to refuse these bogus claims."

Senator McNell hinted that Senator Tarver was "playing politics" in taking his stand against the cut in pensions, declaring that it was a good method to get popular with the public.

Senator C. E. McGregor, himself an old soldier, spoke in favor of the cut.

"There is not a single Confederate soldier in the state," said Senator McGregor, in an impressive speech, "but will take off his hat and bow with patriotic submission to the decrees of this body, even as he bowed in 1861 to the decree of fate. Georgia needed them then, and he responded. Georgia needs money now, and he will respond again. I rely on the tattered remnants of Lee and Gordon, cripled as they are, to respond, when their state says to rally to her financial needs. The old crutch will become stronger, the old hearts beat high again."

NO OTHER FIGHT.

With the exception of the fight on the pension list there was little attempt made to defeat the appropriations bill, Senator Cliff offered an amendment to reduce the appropriation on the cattle tick eradication, but it was defeated. He offered another to strike out the appropriation for using hog serum. This amendment was also killed.

One amendment providing for $500 for the payment of cattle inspectors, offered by Senator Stark, was adopted, as was an amendment of Senator Harrell's requiring an annual report to be made of the expenditures of appropriations for the eradication of the cattle tick.

The senators who voted against the appropriations bill were Olliff, Parrish and Kea.

The senate received the Sheppard substitute to the general tax bill providing for county boards of equalizers, and it was referred to the finance committee. The sentiment of the senate seems to be in favor of a state board of tax equalizers as well as county boards, and it is almost certain to send the bill back to the house with such an amendment.

The joint committee on constitutional amendments has favored a bill abolishing the office of county treasurer, leaving it optional with the voters of the counties whether the office shall be abolished or not.

RICHMOND EDUCATOR AND MINISTER IS DEAD

Dr. G. B. Stricler, Former Atlanta Pastor, Dies in Old Home

The Rev. Givens Brown Strickler is dead. The end came Monday at a private sanitarium in the city. He was one of the best known Presbyterian ministers in the south and his death is widely mourned. He had only been in Atlanta for about a month and had been in ill health since his arrival.

Rev. Mr. Strickler was one of the south's foremost educators, serving on the board of trustees at Washington and Lee for a number of years. He was educated at the university which he had served as trustee and later entered the Union Theological seminary.

In 1882 he came to Atlanta as pastor of the Central Presbyterian church and remained until 1896, when he accepted a chair in the Union seminary at Richmond. He held this position until his death.

The body was taken from Patterson's chapel at noon Tuesday and carried to the Central Presbyterian church on Washington street. A simple service will be held Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 and the body will be sent to Richmond, where it will be interred.

The official board of the Central Presbyterian church formed an honorary escort from the church, and the Atlanta camp, No. 59, of Confederate Veterans, will escort the body to the station.

Dr. Strickler is survived by one sister, Miss V. M. Strickler, of Staunton, Va.; one son, Dr. C. W. Strickler, of Atlanta; four daughters, Mrs. C. F. Rankin, of Laurens, S. C.; Mrs. George H. Denny, of the University of Alabama; Mrs. R. K. Timmons, of Lawton, Okla., and Miss Mary Strickler, of Richmond, Va.

FROM BURNING HOUSE POLICE RESCUE 3 MEN

While fruitlessly investigating a burglar alarm at 105 South Pryor street early Tuesday morning Patrolmen Chapman and Pearson discovered the house at 88 South Pryor to be in flames and by prompt action probably saved the lives of its occupants, three men.

The officers ran at top speed to the building, which was a two-story frame structure, completely enveloped in flames. They rapped loudly and succeeded in waking the still soundly slumbering occupants, J. C. Johnson, city foreman at the rock quarries; M. J. Stevens and I. S. Ford, of south Georgia.

Although the fire department turned out promptly, the building was gutted by the flames.

The first session will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, at which time a welcome will be extended by Mayor Woodward and President Moore, of the Atlanta chamber of commerce. Following the welcome addresses the members of the association will get down to business and will spend the three days listening to talks from officials of various departments and in discussion among themselves as to how the best interests of the public and company may be served.

A feature of the convention will be a trip over the extensive Atlanta terminals of the Southern railway and on Thursday night the agents will be the guests of the traffic department of the company at a dinner to be served at Durand's banquet hall at 7:30 o'clock. L. L. McCleskey, assistant general freight agent, will preside at the dinner.

The officers of the association are C. G. Walker, Louisville, president; E. J. Coffey, East St. Louis, vice president; D. L. Bryan, Columbia, treasurer; and W. J. Townsend, Augusta, secretary. W. D. Scott, the Southern's Atlanta agent, has charge of the arrangements for the convention.

Burglars Leap Over Children to Escape

Two burglars, supposedly negroes, escaped Monday morning from the home of George Hartley, 88 Kelley street, by leaping over a bed in which three children were sleping without awakening the children, onto a window sill against which the bed was placed for coolness. The children slept peacefully on and knew nothing of the visit until told at the breakfast table.

The burglars were alarmed when discovered by Mrs. Hartley who was sleeping in the next room with the door open. She screamed and they precipitately fled. As no articles were missed it is thought Mrs. Hartley discovered the burglars when they first entered.

Breaks Neck While Stepping Off Car

In stepping off the rear end of a fast moving street car in Maritta street between Latimer and Simpson streets Monday night about 9 o'clock, a man who is thought to be J. L. Adair, of Dallas, Ga., sustained fatal injuries.

His neck was broken, and he had not recovered consciousness shortly before noon Tuesday, and according to attending physicians at the Atlanta hospital will probably never do so.

POSTMASTER EDWARDS DENIED INVESTIGATION

Macon Man's Record Not to Be Probed, as He Requested

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Harry Stillwell Edwards, postmaster at Macon, wants an investigation by the senate postoffice committee of his record as a federal officer, which he will not get.

Senator Hankhead, of Alabama, chairman of the committee, stated today that Edwards had filed no charges against Custis Nottingham, who has been nominated by the president for the Macon office, and that there was nothing for the committee to investigate. He added that Senator Hoke Smith, to whom the Nottingham nomination was referred, had reported in favor of its confirmation and declared that the senate would approve the report of the committee at the first opportunity. It is possible that Nottingham will be confirmed this afternoon.

Postmaster Edwards, from all accounts, appears to be much peeved over the fact that the postoffice inspectors, after an investigation of the Macon office, made a report upon the strength of which the postoffice department asked for his resignation. He declined to resign his commission and took the position that the president has no right to remove. This view is not shared by senators, who recognize the power of the chief executive to remove any postmaster.

COTTON SEED CRUSHERS TO HAVE LARGE EXHIBIT

The Georgia Cotton Seed Crushers have started a fund for the purpose of installing a complete and permanent cotton exhibit in the new chamber of commerce building. At a meeting yesterday at the chamber of commerce, a substantial amount was contributed and plans for the exhibit were discussed thoroughly.

Tuesday afternoon the cotton products committee will meet again at which time Chairman W. M. Hutchinson, of the subcommittee, will submit a comprehensive report on the matter.

The project has met with enthusiastic support, says Mr. Hutchinson, and the success of the exhibit is practically assured.

Your Town's Death-Rate

YOU men in charge of municipal affairs have a big responsibility on your hands.

Ever consider that maybe your hold-back, out-of-date and short-sighted policy is keeping the death-rate higher than it ought to be?

Fevers, contagion, death, with their piteous aftermath of poverty and distress may be traceable to your negligence.

Solemn, but true.

Why let your town lack the sanitation, the comforts, the improvements that will drive out disease and make it, at the same time, an attractive, happy place to live in?

We can provide the Improvements. We are Municipal Engineers, and we have put more than 300 towns in good sanitary shape. We should like an opportunity to tell you where these towns are and what we did for them.

We plan, estimate, finance, construct, and, if desired, operate Sanitary Systems, Water and Power Plants, Paving and other municipal improvements. Write to us at once.

SHEET METAL WORKERS ROW OVER DELEGATES

Report of Credentials Committee Precipitates Dispute. Barbecue for Convention

The general convention of the Sheet Metal Workers' International alliance, now in session, assembled at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning and the report of the credentials committee was heard.

A heated dispute that will probably consume several days of the convention, according to men prominent in the organization, immediately arose over the seating of delegates from Locals 5 and 11 of New York City. There are protesting delegations from several other cities and the discussion over credentials promises to be a hard one.

The primary cause of dissension seems to be a desire of two factions, one favoring the other against the adoption of a by-law for the referendum and recall of officers that will be introduced during this convention, to seat their delegates.

On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the convention room will be deserted, and all the delegates will go to White City, where a barbecue will be served.

THEATRES

(Criticisms of initial performances at the local theaters are written by members of The Journal staff. All other matter appearing in this column is furnished by the theater managements.)

FORSYTH—Vaudeville.
GRAND—Motion Pictures.
BIJOU—Tabloid Musical Comedy.

Van Hoven, a rapid fire comedian, is the main pleasing attraction on the bill at the Forsyth this week. He keeps young and old in an uproar and makes the distinct hit of the evening on the bill which is far below the class usually given out by the Forsyth management.

The usual line of vaudeville is on the program, but practically every act is below the standard. The actors do not seem to get next to the audience and fall far short of making the evening an enjoyable one.

The Eight Berlin Madcaps, listed as the headliners, get away with the same old line of dancing which has been shown on the vaudeville stage for years past. Several are good looking, but when it comes to the ludicrous anything new they are just not there.

As for Van Hoven, the dippy magician, he is not much magician, but with the assistance of two well-trained boys he gets some laughter. He keeps the boys moving from the time they hit the stage until they are back of the ailing at the back of the house.

Harry Hayward, with the assistance of two pretty girls, gets away with a small railroad junction scene which pleases. Hayward plays in jam-up fashion the part of the telegraph operator, hotel clerk, baggage master, train caller and a few other parts and gets away with it. The act causes a lot of laughs, but is old.

Robert Everest and his monkey circus is pleasing for children, the monkeys doing most every line of work imaginable.

Dunham and Freeman are clever in song and dance. They have fair voices, a few new songs and a bit of clever dancing.

Pero and Williams, as jugglers, and Annie Kent, the little jester, are other number on the bill which remains throughout the week.

BOTH HOUSES CONTINUE LOBBY INVESTIGATION

Senator Foraker Denies Mulhall's Statements—Newspaper Man Is Called

The house lobby investigation got under way today with Louis Selbold, who prepared the exposures of Martin M. Mulhall for the New York World, as the first witness, identifying published statements and otherwise laying foundations for the cross-examination of Mulhall.

The senate committee having finished with Mulhall, began hearing some of the men referred to in his correspondence. Former Senator Foraker was the first and he generally denied Mulhall's claims of influence with him.

McMichael Says Tax Discoverer Would Find Thousands of Dollars

General judiciary committee No. 1 of the house was not long Monday afternoon in returning a favorable report on the tax discoverer bill of Representative E. H. McMichael, of Marion. During the debate on the question of tax equalization Mr. McMichael attempted to amend the Lipscomb bill by providing for a tax discoverer, but was voted down.

Mr. McMichael explained that his measure was fashioned after the Alabama state law which had succeeded in bringing in thousands of dollars in revenue that the state had never before collected.

An attempt will be made to have the bill set as a special order and come up for passage at this session of the legislature.

Judge John T. Allen Is Given "The Hand."

The state senate showed the love and esteem which its members bear to Judge John T. Allen, when he took the chair Monday morning fo ra few minutes in place of President Anderson.

When the senate adjourned Judge Allen was still presiding, and in accordance with the custom, was applauded vigorously when he announced the senate adjourned.

As the judge advanced to the front of the platform the applause grew tumultuous, and the judge had to bow very deeply before the admiring senators would stop.

It Sounded Like the Umps Announcing Mis Batteries.

Senator G. Y. Harrell, of the Twelfth, believes in doing things yourself if you want them done. It is customary for announcements of committee meetings to be sent to the clerk's desk to be read after adjournment, but Senator Harrell forgot to write his out Monday afternoon.

So it was, that when the senate was filing out after adjournment, Senator Harrell placed his hands to his mouth and roared. "O-um-um-b-r-r-r-imp!"

Nobody knew what he was talking about, but they appreciated his spirit, and cheered him lustily. But we wonder if there was a full attendance at that committee meeting.

Converse Didn't Want His Seat Used for "Sichilke."

Senator W. L. Converse, of the Sixth, rose to a new point of order Monday afternoon.

While Senator Smith was delivering a strong speech against appropriating money for the medical school at Augusta he happened to be standing at Senator Converse's seat, nothing unusual, as senators are in the habit of sitting most any place in the senate chamber.

Senator Smith had reached a most eloquent part of his peroration, when Senator Converse emerged from the president's room and shouted, "Mr. President, I rise to a point of order. The gentleman is using my seat to deliver a speech, to which I object very much."

Before the president could rule, Mr. Smith took another chair. The senate roared.

Representative Slade Peeved Over His Military Bills

Rising to a point of personal privilege Monday morning, Representative J. J. Slade, of Muscogee, called the attention of the house to his two militia bills that have been referred to the committee on military affairs, but have not yet been reported, despite the fact that he has urged immediate action.

Mr. Slade declared that Representative Spence, chairman of the committee, had promised a report, but that he appeared to be dodging the issue. He insisted on having both bills reported at once whether sent back to the house with a favorable recommendation or not.

Both of Mr. Slade's measures would place the militia under the civil authorities in times of stress.

House Members Did Not Take Kindly to 9 o'Clock Convenement.

For the first time during this session of the general assembly the house was called to order at 9 o'clock Monday, instead of at 11, the usual hour for beginning the week. Speaker Burwell had called the members attention to special orders of vital importance set for Monday and had urged every one to be in his seat that no time be lost. Less than a hundred seats were occupied when the house was called to order. It so happened that the measures before the house required a constitutional majority of two-thirds or 123 votes and there were not that many in the hall had every one voted aye.

Accordingly the special orders, known as the administration bills, amendatory to the general tax act, were necessarily postponed until Tuesday morning.

TEXTILE MEN TO RETURN TO ATLANTA NEXT YEAR

A special meeting of the executive committee of the Southern Textile association was held Monday afternoon at the Hotel Ansley. At the meeting it was decided to hold the next association convention in Atlanta. The dates were arranged for November 21-22, 1914. The headquarters will be at the Hotel Ansley.

Alonzo Iler, chairman of the committee, presided over the meeting in the absence of T. B. Wallace, the president of the association.

Mr. Drake, a local member of the association, was made chairman of a committee on arrangements for the November convention.

TO DISCUSS PLANS FOR OPERATING CREMATORY

A meeting of the board of health will be held Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock to discus plans for the operation of the crematory, and all phases of the matter will be taken up. The discussion will determine the number of men to be employed at the plant, the amount of wages and similar matters.

F. A. Quillian, Chief Jentzen, of the sanitary department, Engineer Canham, of the Destructor company; C. L. Ashley and others will be present at the meeting which will take place in the office of the board of health.

CONLEY HOLDS OUT AGAINST ROSSER'S CROSS FIRE

the time that you say you went to the factory, Friday to Saturday, didn't you?"

"I guess so. I don't remember the day, though."

"Why did you do it?"

"I didn't want to put myself in the factory at all on Saturday."

"You didn't want to get mixed up in it. Is that is?"

"Yes, sir, that's it."

WANTED TO KEEP OUT.

"That was the reason you didn't say you could write at first, wasn't it? You didn't want to get mixed up in it?"

"Yes, sir."

Attorney Rosser asked Conley a number of questions about the jail and the police station, drawing a comparison between the two. He asked the negro if he didn't like the police station better than the jail.

The negro replied that he liked both places as long as he had to stay in jail.

Solicitor Dorsey objected to these questions, unless the records of the police station and the jail were introduced in evidence. It was irrelevant anyway, said he.

Attorney Rosser replied to the solicitor:

"You needn't be afraid. We're going to put up the evidence."

Solicitor Dorsey replied: "Then I withdraw my objection, upon that assurance."

Attorney Rosser said: "I'll withdraw that statment. I don't want to commit myself."

"SHOOT ANY OLD WAY."

Solicitor Dorsey renewed his objection. After some more conversation, he withdrew it again. "Go ahead; shoot any old way," said the solicitor.

Attorney Rosser continued questioning the negro.

"So you finally, without any fear of anything, after four hours' questioning, went ahead and said you were going to tell the whole truth, did you?"

"Yes, sir. I told them that."

"Well, why did you tell that you didn't get up till 9:30?"

"Well, I was at the factory at 9:30, and I didn't want to tell them that."

"But you said you were telling the whole truth then?"

"I wasn't telling all of it."

"You told the officers you saw the clock on a negro university and it said 9 or 9:30, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir, I said I saw the clock, but I didn't tell them what time it was. I said I couldn't see the hands."

"Oh, you said it was cloudy and you couldn't see the clock?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see what time it was?"

"No, sir."

CLAIMS TRUTH NOW.

"Well, Jim, what you are telling isn't true, anyhow, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"You say you couldn't tell the time; what time did you tell the officers you saw it?"

"I told them I thought it was about 9 o'clock."

"But it wasn't 9 o'clock, was it?"

"I told a story about the time."

"You told them you'd forgotten, but it was between 9 and 9:30 didn't you?"

"I disremember."

"What did you tell them you had for breakfast that morning?"

"A piece of liver steak, a piece of bread and a cup of tea."

"Didn't you tell them you had some sausage?"

"I told them there was some sausage on the table, but I didn't tell them I ate any of it."

"Did you ever see a negro fail to eat sausage when there was some on the table in front of him?"

"Yes, sir."

"What did you eat?"

"I ate some steak, some liver, some bread and some tea."

"You told the officers that you sat down in the chair a while after breakfast, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"But that ain't so,is it?"

"No, sir."

TRIES TO TELL TRUTH.

"Jim, when did you really get up? Try to tell the truth, now. Tell us when you got up."

"About 6 o'clock."

"And you told the officers 9 or 9:30?"

"Yes, sir."

"You told the officers that you sat in a chair for about 10 minutes after you ate?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what else did you tell them at this time?"

"I disremember. If you'll read it to me, I can tell you."

"I guess you can. You told the officers that you went straight to Peters street, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, why didn't you tell me that?"

"READ IT AND I'LL TELL YOU."

"I forgot. I told you if you'd read it to me I'd tell you."

"You mean if I repeat the story you've learned, you can repeat it back to me?"

"No, sir."

"You told them that you went to a beer saloon on Peters street, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"What beer saloon did you tell them you went to?"

"A saloon at the corner of Haynes and Peters streets."

"What else?"

"I told them I drank two beers and I saw a fellow in the saloon with a whip around his neck—a man who drives a dray."

"Did you tell 'em this at that time?"

"I don't know about that time, but I did tell them that."

"What did you tell 'em was the name of that fellow that had the whip around his neck?"

"I told 'em they called him Bob."

"In your statement on May 18 what saloon did you tell them you visited? A whole lot, eh?"

"I told them three saloons."

"This was the first time you ever talked to them?"

"I do not know if it was the first time."

"What saloon did you tell them you went to the second time you talked to them, when you told them you were going to tell the whole truth?"

"I disremember which ones I told them that time, but I can tell you the saloons."

FORGETS TELLING OF WHISKY.

"In that statement, didn't you tell them you bought some whisky?"

"I don't know if I told them about the whisky that time."

"You told them that you bought the liquor at 11 o'clock? That was a lie, wasn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, why did you tell them that? Why didn't you tell them it was before 8?"

"I didn't want to put myself in the factory twice."

"Why?"

"Because there was nothing doing there." The negro reaffirmed that this was his only reason for the statement.

"When did you first tell that you got to the factory at 8:30? Before or after they took you from the jail to police station?"

"I think it was afterwards."

"Then you've made most of these elaborate changes since you left the jail?"

"Yes, sir."

TOLD STORY TO STARNES.

"Whom did you first tell that you got to the factory at 8:30 instead of 10:30?"

"It think it was Detectives Starnes and Campbell."

"And that was after you got back to headquarters?"

"Yes."

"Whom did you first tell that you didn't leave home at 9 o'clock?"

"I don't remember."

"Well, why did you change the story?"

"Just because I knew that the truth was bound to come."

"Well, that was a long time after you had told that Mr. Frank got you to move the body, wasn't it? And you told them at that time that you were telling the whole truth, didn't you?"

At this point Solicitor Dorsey interrupted the cross examination, objecting to what he termed "the comments" of Mr. Rosser. In the course of his statement to the court, the solicitor said, "I have no objection to your going on here till Saturday night, but I want the examination to be conducted in a lawful manner."

CAN'T DISPUTE WITNESS.

Judge Roan stated that Mr. Rosser could ask the negro if he had not made certain statements, but that he could not argue or dispute with him.

"I'm not disputing with him. I'm treating him in a perfectly ladylike manner," retorted Mr. Rosser. He continued his examination.

"The first time you told about moving the girl's body, didn't you say you were going to tell the whole truth?"

"Yes."

"Still, in that statement you claimed that you got to the factory after 10 o'clock?"

"I don't know why I didn't correct it then, but I did afterwards," said the negro. "I don't think they asked me about it."

"Well, why didn't you correct them about the whisky then?"

"I did tell the truth about it, but I don't remember the time."

"Yes, but in that statement where you said you were telling the whole truth, you said it was at 11 o'clock?"

"No, sir, I never did say it was at 11."

"How much beer did you tell them that you drank that morning?"

"Four beers."

"Didn't you tell them it was six beers and some of them double-headers?"

"I don't remember telling them that."

"The first saloon you got into, you told them you bought two beers, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you told them you bought six beers altogether, didn't you?"

"No, sir, I said four or five beers."

"Didn't you tell them you had a couple of double-headers?"

"No, sir, I didn't say anything about double-headers."

"Well, did you tell 'em you bought the wine, that time?"

PUT WINE IN HIS BEER.

"No, sir, I didn't tell them nothing about buying wine. I said I had some put in my beer."

"You didn't tell them that at that time, did you?"

"I'm not certain. I don't know about that."

"Well, then, isn't it a fact that you never told them you'd bought wine, until after you'd been brought back from the jail?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Well, when was it you bought this wine?"

"On Saturday morning."

"And you never told anybody about that until you were taken from the jail to the lockup?"

"I don't know. I told Mr. Black and Mr. Scott, though, some time."

"Well, when was it, Jim?"

"I don't know, sir, but I told them."

"Your memory isn't very good, is it Jim?"

"It's better this morning."

"Oh, it's improved over night, has it?"

FRANK LAUGHS.

At this juncture Leo M. Frank and Mrs. Frank both laughed, and the negro grinned.

"So the jail helped you out last night, did it, Jim?" Mr. Rosser continued.

"I don't know about that. It's better though, this morning."

"Oh, it's not any better this morning, is it?"

"Yes, sir."

"It was pretty bad last night, wasn't it?"

"No, sir, not so very bad."

Attorney Rosser asked Conley this question: "Now when you made this statement, you said you went straight from Peters street to the Capital City laundry, didn't you?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Ain't your memory good enough for that, Jim? In that Jim! Tell me."

"I remember going to the laundry. I don't know what I told them about it," though."

"Well, didn't you tell the detectives that you went from Peters street to the Capital City laundry and met Frank on the way?"

"I don't remember saying so."

"Didn't you tell it, now?" repeated Mr. Rosser.

"I don't know."

"Well, if I ask you if you remember a thing, and you say you do, and then I turn around and put it in different words and ask you again, you can't remember it, can you?"

"I don't know, sir."

"You told the officers the first time that you went from Peters street direct to Nelson and Forsyth streets, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

ADMITS FALSE STATEMENT.

"That was a story, wasn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"But now you say you went from the factory to Nelson and Forsyth streets, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why didn't you tell them in your first statement that the first time you met Frank was after you left the factory?"

"I did tell them that."

"But not in your first story?"

"I don't remember which story it was."

"What officers did you tell that to?"

"I disremember. It was Mr. Starnes or Mr. Campbell or Mr. Scott or Mr. Black."

"Was that before or after you were brought back from the jail, that you told them that?"

"Before."

"How long before?"

"I don't know."

"In your first statement, didn't you tell them that when you met Frank at Nelson and Forsyth streets, he asked you where you were going?"

"I disremember."

"Then your memory's not any better today than it was yesterday evening? It doesn't improve?"

"Yes, sir."

WHAT FRANK SAID.

"Well, improve it again and tell me what Frank said to you."

"He said, 'Ha, ha!——'"

"That's what you say now. Tell us what you told the officers. Didn't you tell them that Frank asked you where you were going, and you told him you were going to the Capital City laundry to see your mother?"

"He said, 'Ha, ha!——'"

"I'm asking you what you told the officers before you told them he said, 'ha, ha.'"

"I disremember."

"You don't remember telling the officers that he asked you where you were going, and that yo unswered you were going to the Capital City laundry to see your mother?"

"No, sir."

WASN'T TRUE.

"Well if you did tell the officers that, it wasn't true, was it?"

"No, sir, it wasn't so."

"In your statement to the officers, how long did you say Mr. Frank stayed at Montag Brothers?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't you say 'twenty minutes?'"

"I said 'about twenty minutes.'"

"Yesterday you said you didn't have no idea how long he was gone."

"Yes, sir, I wasn't asked then what I told the detectives."

"Well, why did you tell the detectives twenty minutes if you didn't know how long he was gone?"

"They told me to fix a time, and I told them the best I could."

"Did Mr. Frank stay an hour at Montag's?"

"I don't know how long."

"Well, you told the officers about twenty minutes?"

"That's what I told Mr. Scott."

"And you had no idea then, and you haven't got any idea now, how long he stayed at Montag's?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you say yesterday that Frank didn't say anything to you from the time he left Nelson and Forsyth streets until the time he got to the factory?"

DIDN'T CATCH REMARK.

"No, sir, I said when he was in front of that store and liked to have run into the little baby, that he turned around and said something but I didn't know what he said."

"You didn't tell the police that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Whom did you tell?"

"I don't know which one."

"Was that before or after you got out of jail?"

"After."

"You got out of jail on June 11, didn't you?"

"I don't know sir."

"Then you didn't tell that until after June 11?"

"I don't know. I told it after I got out of jail."

"Why didn't you tell about the baby transaction, when you were telling the story about moving the body"

"I did tell about it, but I don't know in what statement."

"Did you tell Mr. Dorsey that?"

"Yes, sir."

"After you got out of jail?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long after?"

"I don't know."

"Why didn't you tell the officers Frank wanted you to watch for him after you went back to the factory that Saturday?"

"I did."

"Well, why didn't you tell them that at the same time you were telling about moving the body?"

"I did tell them, but I don't know when."

"Well, tell me when and to whom you told that."

"I disremember."

"Why didn't you tell about his stomping his feet when you first told about moving the body?"

"I don't know when I first told about him stomping his feet."

"Whom did you tell about it?"

"Mr. Scott, Mr. Black, Mr. Campbell and Mr. Starnes."

On cross examination, Attorney Rosser then left the statements which the negro had made to the police and began questioning him about what he actually saw and did on the morning of the tragedy.

QUESTION ABOUT TRAGEDY.

By a tedious examination, he brought out statements to the effect that the negro saw Darley and Miss Mattie Smith at the factory before he went to Montag's, and that he also saw Darley after he had returned. The negro said that he went to the factory that morning he remained about half an hour after his conversation with Frank. However, he replied, "yes" to this question: "You saw Darley and Miss Smith about 9:30 o'clock before you left, didn't you?" Mr. Rosser asked him if he was certain of this, and the negro replied yes.

Attorney Rosser also brought out the statement that he saw Mr. Holloway talking to a peg-legged negro after he came back from Montag's and a short time before Darley finally left the factory. After talking to the peg-legged negro, said Conley, Mr. Holloway went upstairs, and came down again in about fifteen minutes later with a different coat on, and his hat, and left. The negro said that anyone coming down the steps could have seen him at the point where he was sitting on the box.

The negro stated, under continued questions, that for a long time he was mistaken and thought he saw Darley and Miss Smith after he went back to the factory from Montag's.

"Who corrected that?" demanded Mr. Rosser.

"I did myself—I just remembered it," said the negro.

"Whom did you tell—Mr. Dorsey?"

"Yes, and Mr. Starnes and Campbell, too." The negro added that he made the correction after he had been taken back from the tower to the jail.

"IF IT'S THERE I SAID IT."

About the lady in green, Jim, didn't you tell the detectives that after Mr. Holloway went up she came down?"

"No, sir. I don't think I told 'em that."

"Didn't you tell them that, Jim?"

"Well, if it's down there, I must have told them that, but I made a mistake if I did."

"Well, who do you say now went up first."

"She did."

"When did you say yesterday that Mr. Quinn went up?"

"I said he was the last man that went up."

"Well, didn't you tell the officers that you saw Mr. Holloway going up, and that then came a lady in a green dress?"

"I don't know. If I did, I made a mistake."

"How many mistakes did you make in this matter?"

"I don't know."

"How long did you tell the officers she stayed up there?"

"I don't remember."

"How long did she stay up there?"

"A good while."

"What do you call a good while, now, Jim?"

"Ten or fifteen minutes."

"Didn't you tell the officers she stayed up there six or seven minutes?"

"I don't know."

"Is that another mistake?"

"Well, if it's down there I must have said it."

"After that lady came down, how long was it before the next person came in?"

"I don't know."

"Why didn't you tell the officers about the other people that went up there that time?"

"Well, I didn't want to give them too many names then."

WANTED TO STEER CLEAR.

"You didn't want to be connected with it, huh?"

"I guess that's it," replied the negro.

"Well, four were enough to connect with it, weren't they?"

Before Conley could answer, Solicitor Dorsey objected to the question on the ground that it was in manner of argument. Judge Roan, after listening to Solicitor Dorsey's argument of about a minute, ruled: "Well, if it's a question of argument, I'll rule it out." "May I ask your honor to have the stenographer read the question?" said Solicitor Dorsey. The stenographer read it. Judge Roan held that it was a matter of argument, and Attorney Rosser said: "Well, then, I'll put it another way."

"You did know that four others went up and down and that all had an opportunity to see you?"

"Yes, sir, if they looked over there."

"You didn't tell about the others, for fear they would report on you?"

"I never had thought about it."

"Why didn't you tell the policemen about them?"

"I didn't think about it."

"Was it before or after you were in jail that you corrected this statement?"

"I don't know, sir."

"So that was just an honest mistake of yours, about people going up and down?"

"No, sir."

"Well, who did you correct it to?"

"To Detectives Starnes and Campbell."

"Where?"

"At police headquarters?"

"Was Solicitor Dorsey there?"

"I don't know, sir, whether he was or not."

"You are not sure, are you, whether you corrected this statement at police headquarters or at Dorsey's office?"

"I think it was at headquarters."

"How many times have you been to Mr. Dorsey's office?"

"Three times."

"How many times has Mr. Dorsey been to headquarters to see you?"

"About three times."

WANTED TO HOLD BACK.

"Then it took Mr. Dorsey seven times to get your statement straight?"

"I just told a little more each time."

"Then you'd add a little and take a little away?"

"I didn't want to tell it all."

"Why?"

"I wanted to hold back some."

"Well, when you told about helping Frank to move the body, you told it all, didn't you?"

"I don't know."

"You wouldn't help Frank then by holding back anything, could you?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Well, why didn't you tell it all, then?"

"I wanted to hold back some."

"You had to correct a lot of stories?"

"Yes, sir, I had to make some corrections."

"You've been kept busy correcting your stories and adding to them?"

"No, sir."

"Well, it took Mr. Dorsey seven times to get it straight, didn't it?"

"I don't know. I didn't tell it all at any one time."

"You told the officers that as soon as Frank whistled you went up and found him at the head of the stairs?"

NEGRO TAKES STRYCHNINE.

The jury asked to be excused at this juncture. While the jury was out, Conley took a srablet that a court attache gave to him. It was explained that it was a strychnine tablet. "The negro is weak," said the attache, privately. "He's been locked up in a cell and hasn't had any exercise, and this physical strain is telling on him."

When the jury returned, Mr. Rosser resumed his questioning, the concluding question being forgotten for the moment. Mr. Rosser continued questioning the negro about his statements to the police.

When he brought from the negro the admission that a certain minor statement by himself was a lie, Solicitor Dorsey interrupted again with his previous objection against what he termed Mr. Rosser's effort to impeach the witness without resorting to the methods prescribed by the code for that procedure.

Mr. Rosser's question was read to Judge Roan, who held that the attorney had not followed the rule in that he had not called the negro's attention to the time, the place, and the people to whom he made the statement.

ROSSER CHANGES QUESTION.

Mr. Rosser objected to the question. He addressed the court. "Your honor, Mr. Rosser is examining this witness upon the record of yesterday. I submit that if he intends to pursue this line of questioning, he should put this in as evidence or let the witness read it or have it read to him. This is the same as any other written testimony.

picture show and looked at the pictures on the outside."

"And that is the trtuh, is it?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Yes, sir."

"Did you go back to Peters street before you went home?"

"Yes."

"How long did you stay?"

"About five minutes."

"How much beer did you drink?"

"About two glasses."

"Were they double-headers?"

"I don't remember."

"On May 29, to Black and Scott, you added some more things and said that that made the whole truth."

"I don't remember. I know that I kept adding things, several times, that I'd been holding back."

"After each of these additions you were visited by Mr. Dorsey, weren't you?"

"Not all of them."

"Then you visited Mr. Dorsey—I don't mean socially, but for these corrections."

"Yes, sir."

"He sure did," said Mr. Dorsey, in an aside.

Attorney Rosser again abandoned the negro's statements to the police.

"On Friday Frank talked to you and Miss Willis saw him, you said yesterday, didn't you?"

"No, I didn't say that. I said Miss Willis could have seen us."

"Well, the next morning, you just happened to meet Mr. Frank at the front door, did you?"

"We got there at the same time, but he went in ahead of me."

"Did you lock the door any time that day?"

"Yes, sir, I locked it."

"What time was it?"

"I don't know."

HEARD GIRL SCREAM.

"And you heard the screaming and then the stamping? Did you lock the door then?"

"Yes, sir."

"But it was unlocked while you were upstairs, wasn't it?"

"No, I unlocked it when I heard the whistle, before I went upstairs."

"You said yesterday that Frank showed you that day how to unlock the door, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, hadn't he showed you before?"

"Yes, on Thanksgiving day."

"Well, why did he do it again?"

"I don't know."

"Anybody could have come in there while you were upstairs, couldn't they?"

"I don't know anything about that. I didn't see anybody."

"You say now that Frank went into the second factory a little before you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, yesterday, didn't you say you went in together?"

"I don't know."

RIGHT BEHIND FRANK.

"Well now, let's see." The attorney went *through a transcript of the state*ment that Conley made Monday. Then he read Conley's answer in which Conley said Monday that Frank and he entered the factory together. "Did you make a mistake, Jim?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Well, I was right behind him."

"Did Frank say anything about the Capital City Laundry, at the factory, when you told him you wanted to go down there and see your mother?"

"Yes, sir."

"What were his exact words?"

"Well, I don't remember his exact words, but he said something about it."

"Well, now, tell me one thing Mr. Frank said when you told him you wanted to go to the Capital City Laundry."

"One thing he said was: 'Don't let Mr. Darley see you.'"

"Oh, Jim, I don't mean that. I mean in answer to you telling him you wanted to go. What did you answer when I asked you that yesterday?"

Mr. Hooper objected to the question. He addressed the court. "Your honor, Mr. Rosser is examining this witness upon the record of yesterday. I submit that if he intends to pursue this line of questioning, he should put this in as evidence or let the witness read it or have it read to him. This is the same as any other written testimony.

other written testimony. The opposing counsel can't be allowed to discredit this witness in this manner. In the eyes of the law, the transcript of yesterday's testimony is now written evidence. It's written evidence as soon as it comes from the witness' mouth. It's a superhuman task for the witness to remember the sequence of the questions he was asked yesterday. I object to Mr. Rosser asking the witness questions in this manner."

Attorney Rosser arose. "It's not superhuman for the witness to tell the truth twice!" he expostulated. "Or a lie twice. I'm going to see if he can tell the same lie twice."

Mr. Hooper reiterated his argument, declaring it was unfair to the witness for the defense to proceed in this way. If Attorney Rosser was going to pursue this line of questioning, he would insist on the testimony being read to the witness to refresh his memory.

Mr. Rosser arose again and said that he didn't intend to ask the witness the sequence of the questions, and that he wasn't using the transcript of yesterday's testimony to impeach the witness. "I've got 'em," he said, "simply to aid my memory. I want to see if he can repeat the answers to the questions I asked him yesterday."

Andrew Hooper said, "If he wants to do that, let the stenographer read the questions. He's sworn to read them correctly."

JOAN RULES WITH ROSSER.

After some other argument, Judge Roan ruled with the defense, with the understanding that the questions would not be argumentative or aimed to impeach the witness directly on his own testimony.

"Jim, did Mr. Frank tell you why he wanted you to meet him at Nelson and Forsyth streets?"

"No, sir."

"You could have come back to the factory from the laundry just as easily, couldn't you?"

"Yes, sir, if he hadn't told me to meet him."

"Jim, you told the officers first that you met Frank there by accident, didn't you?"

"I disremember."

"You got to Nelson and Forsyth streets about 10:20?"

"Between 10 and 10:30."

WHAT FRAN KSAID.

"When you saw Frank going to Montag's, it was after 10 o'clock and before 10:30. You don't know how long he stayed. I believe you said, but you thought it was about an hour?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then it must have been 11:30 when he came on back?"

"I don't know what time it was."

"When Frank saw you standing there at Nelson and Forsyth streets, what did he say?"

"He says, 'Ha, ha! Ha, ha! You's here, is you?'"

"What else did he say?"

"Well, he went a minute until I go to Montag's. I was standing on Nelson street across Forsyth on the corner nearest toward Mitchell street."

"And you think you stood there waiting for Frank for about an hour?"

"I don't know."

"Well, what is the best of your recollection?"

"It might have been about a half an hour."

"You said just now it was about an hour?"

"I said I didn't know exactly."

DON'T KNOW.

"You don't know why he wanted you to meet him there?"

"No, sir."

"And that was all the conversation he had with you?"

"Yes, sir."

"When was it he told you that a young lady was coming to chat with him?"

"The last time was at the factory."

"He told you that, then, before you left the factory and after you got back to the factory?"

"Yes, sir. After we got back to the factory and just before he showed me about locking the door."

"What else did he tell you about the door?"

"He showed me how to turn the lock and told me nobody who didn't have a key could get in."

"Why didn't you tell us about the key yesterday?"

"I did."

"Now Jim, didn't he say he told you to just turn the knob and nobody could get in?"

"I told about the key."

"You say he told you he was going to stamp on the floor, and when you heard him stamp to lock the door, and when you heard him whistle to unlock the door and come upstairs?"

EXPECTING A CALLER.

"Yes, sir, he told me that after he told me to sit down on the box."

"He had told you about these signals before, hadn't he?"

"Yes, sir, on Thanksgiving."

"Why did he repeat it?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Then what?"

"When I sat down on the box Mr. Frank told me there was going to be a young lady up here directly and he was going to have a little chat with her."

"What's the name of the lady in the green dress, who came in?"

"I don't know."

"What time did she come in?"

"I don't know."

"Well, hadn't you been back from Montag's only five minutes?"

"I couldn't tell—it hadn't been long."

"How long did she stay?"

"About fifteen minutes."

"Did the peg-legged negro come then?"

"Yes."

"Didn't you say in your second talk to Black and Scott that the peg-legged negro came first?"

"I don't believe I did."

"How long had she been gone before the negro came?"

"Two or three minutes."

"Mr. Holloway went out to the wagon and talked with the man, didn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

"Didn't you say yesterday that he read a bill?"

"Not out at the wagon. He read that coming down the steps."

"How long was it before Darley came down?"

"Five or ten minutes."

"Then Holloway went out and the green dress lady went out, and then Quinn came, didn't he?"

"Yes."

COULDN'T MIX HIM.

"Did he go up and come back before Monteen Stover and Miss Mary Phagan went up?"

"He came up after Miss Stover had gone out. They were all three there almost together."

"Now, let's see," said Mr. Rosser. "First Quinn came and left, and then Miss Monteen Stover came, and then the lady that's dead?"

"No, sir," said the negro. "The lady that's dead came first, and then Miss Monteen went up and came back down."

"Are those all the people you saw?"

"I think so.

"Didn't you see Mrs. Mae Barrett?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you see Miss Corinthia Hall, and Miss Hall, the stenographer, and the office boy, and Miss Emma Clark?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you see Mrs. White?"

"No, sir."

"Well, then," said Mr. Rosser, "the people you saw there were Holloway, the peg-legged negro, Mr. Darley, the green dress, Quinn, Miss Mary Phagan and Miss Stover?"

"Yes, sir," answered the negro.

"Well, did you stay right there on that box all the time?"

"No, sir. I left it twice for a minute or two."

"Are you certain you went to sleep after Miss Stover left?"

"Yes, sir."

"You locked the front door after you woke up?"

"Yes, sir."

"Didn't you get up to let somebody in?"

"No, sir, there wasn't nobody came."

"Mr. Frank didn't give you notice to lock the door until after Miss Stover had gone up, did he?"

"Not till after she came down."

SCREAM BEFORE SIGNAL.

"You heard the scream before you heard the stamping, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"You heard the footsteps going back toward the metal room. Was that before or after you heard this scream?"

"That was before."

"And the scream was before Miss Monteen Stover came down?"

"It was before she ever went up."

"In your four statements to the police, you didn't say anything about seeing Mary Phagan, did you, that day?"

"I told the detectives."

"Well, did you tell?"

"Mr. Starnes and Mr. Campbell."

"When did you tell about that scream?"

"I don't know the date. I told Mr. Starnes and Mr. Campbell."

"Did you tell these two things at the same time?"

"Not at the same time. I told them right after one another."

"Well, it was the same meeting?"

"Yes, sir."

"And after you heard the scream, you went to sleep, did you?"

"Not right then. I heard something else before I went to sleep."

"Well, what?"

"Miss Stover came in and went out."

"Now, did you tell the police the rest of this before or after you went to the jail?"

"It was afterwards."

"How long afterwards?"

"Quite a while."

"Well, after Monteen Stover went out you went to sleep?"

"Yes, sir."

"And the stamp woke you up, did it?"

"Yes, sir."

"How many times did you hear him stamp?"

"I heard Mr. Frank stamp three times."

"And then you went upstairs?"

"No, sir, I went and locked the door, and then kicked twice on the elevator door, and went and sat down again."

"When did you first tell about kicking on the elevator door?"

"I told it to the detectives."

"What sort of shoes did Mary Phagan have on?"

"I noticed them after she was dead."

"Didn't you notice them before then?"

"No, sir."

"The only women you saw go up the stairs were the woman in green, Miss Mattie Smith and Miss Stover?"

"That's all, after we come back from Mr. Montag's."

"How long did Monteen Stover stay upstairs?"

"Just a little while."

"You said yesterday she stayed up there a good while, didn't you?"

"I don't remember saying that. I think I said she stayed up there about five minutes."

"How long did the lady in green stay up there?"

"It seemed to me about ten or fifteen minutes."

"How do you know?"

"I don't know. I'm only guessing."

JUST MAKING GUESSES.

"Oh, you're only guessing at all of this, then?"

"Yes, sir. I'm only guessing."

"How long after you heard him stamp before he whistled?"

"I couldn't say."

"With your best efforts, what do you think?"

"Ten or fifteen minutes."

"You heard nothing else for ten or fifteen minutes?"

"No, sir."

"What did you do when you heard him stamp?"

"I unlocked the door."

"And he whistled ten or fifteen minutes later?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long now do you say it was between the time he stamped and the time he whistled?"

"It didn't seem long."

"When you got up to the top of the steps, what did you see?"

"I saw Mr. Frank, and he was trembling, nervous going on, and shaking himself."

"When did you first tell that?"

"I don't know."

"When you told the detectives about moving the body, and when you were telling the whole truth and nothing but the truth?"

"I don't know when."

"Whom did you tell?"

"Mr. Dorsey, Mr. Starnes and Mr. Campbell, I think Mr. Black and Mr. Scott."

"When did you tell Black and Scott?"

"I don't know."

ANSWERS EVASIVE.

"Did you tell Black and Scott about him looking wild in his eyes and about his face being red, when you were telling them the truth and nothing but the truth?"

"I don't know whether I did or not. I intended to tell it all then."

"You didn't mean to tell any stories on that day?"

"No, sir."

"That day when you told Black and Scott about moving the body, you meant to tell the whole truth—everything you remembered?"

"I don't know whether I did or not. I told the best I could remember."

"If you told anything else afterwards, it was because you just remembered it?"

"I guess you're right."

"You say Frank had a cord in his hand when you came upstairs?"

"Yes, sir, he had a cord, and he was trembling and shaking."

"I didn't ask you anything about him trembling and shaking. I asked you it he had a cord."

"Yes, sir, he had a cord."

"When did you tell that?"

"I don't know."

"The same day you were doing your best to tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth?"

STICKS TO STORY.

"I don't know. I couldn't think of everything that day."

"What did Frank do with the cord?"

"He threw it over near the saw on the left hand side of the building looking toward the office."

"He threw it over while he was standing there?"

"Yes, sir, when he was talking to me and telling me to hurry."

"What else did Frank say to you?"

"When I came up he asked me if I saw that little girl come up here a while ago. I told him 'yes, sir, I saw two little girls go up, but I only saw one of them go out.'"

"You didn't tell that when you told about moving the body."

"I think I did."

"Did he say anything else standing there?"

STORY OF TRAGEDY.

"Yes, sir. He asked me if I saw that little girl come up here a while ago, and I told him, yes, sir, I saw two of them come up, and I saw only one go out. He said, 'Uh-huh. That little girl that didn't go out came up to the office. She went back to the metal department to see about some work. I went back there with her. I wanted to be with her, and she refused me. I ain't built like other me, you know. I struck her and struck her too hard. Now you go back there and get her and bring her out. There's some money in it for you.'"

"What did he say he struck her with?"

"He didn't say."

"You didn't tell that to Black and Scott, did you? Didn't you tell them that Frank said he picked up a little girl and let her fall? And you didn't say he told you anything about hitting her?"

"Yes, sir, I think that's right."

"Well, why didn't you tell them, then?"

"I thought I did."

"Well, if you didn't, why didn't you?"

"It just come to my membrance."

"Jim, you've got a good mind, haven't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, which did you tell the officers that time you were telling them the whole truth and nothing but the truth?"

"I told Mr. Black and Mr. Scott one time."

RELATES SAME DETAIL.

"On May 29, didn't you say to the detectives that Frank told you he'd picked up a little girl and let her fall? You claimed to be telling the whole truth, then. Why didn't you say he told you he struck her?"

"I remember now that then I told them that he struck her."

"You said yesterday that at the head of the stairs he told you he was not built like other men. Why didn't you tell Black and Scott that?"

"I'm certain I told Mr. Scott," said the negro.

"You say he told you back there what to do—get her and bring her to him. Didn't you know then that she was dead?"

"No, sir, I didn't."

"Why did you tell the detectives that he told you to bring her to the elevator?"

"I didn't tell them that then. It was after she fell he spoke of the elevator. At first he just said, 'Bring her up here.'"

"You went back there and found her near the toilet—"

DORSEY AND ROSSER TILT.

Solicitor Dorsey jumped to his feet, objecting to the assertion made by the attorney. Mr. Rosser turned toward the solicitor and bellowed, "I said didn't you?" Mr. Dorsey sat down.

"You say that you found the cord around her neck and a piece of her underclothes, don't you?"

"I don't know about it being her underclothes. I found a piece of white cloth around her neck, and the knot was tied behind her head and held her head up off the floor."

"When you were telling Black and Scott the whole truth, did you tell them about the cord?"

"I don't know. I told them all I could remember," said the negro.

"Didn't you say to Black and Scott that when you got to where the girl was you hollered back to Frank, 'This girl is dead?' Why didn't you tell them that you went out to the door to say that?"

"I don't know. I don't remember what I told."

"When did you look at the clock?"

"It was four minutes to 1."

DIFFERENT CLOTH.

"You didn't say a word about that cloth that you wrapped Mary Phagan's body up in, when you were telling your story to Black and Scott, did you?"

"Yes, sir, I told them."

"Jim, when you were talking to Frank up front, could you see the face of the clock?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you knew it was four minutes to 1?"

"Yes, sir."

"After that you got some burlap, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"It wasn't the piece we had here the other day, was it?"

"No, sir. It was a piece of different cloth, something like your shirt."

"How big a piece?"

"Well, it was larger than me."

"How wide was it—about two feet?"

"I don't know sir."

"EXACTLY" TW OFEET.

"Well, what do you call two feet?"

"This is what I call two feet," said the negro, innocently putting the toe of his right foot against the heel of his left and holding them up. The court laughed.

"How many inches are there in a foot, Jim?"

"I don't know, sir."

Conley held his hands up about two and a half feet apart, and said the cloth was that wide.

"Well, what did you do with the cloth?"

"I went back to the metal room and laid it down on the floor. Then I picked up the girl's head and laid it on it. Then I rolled her over on it."

"When you were telling your story to Black and Starnes, you didn't tell them about coming down toward Frank's office, did you?"

COURT RECESSES.

"I told them some time. I don't remember when."

"Who was present?"

"I disremember."

Court recessed at this point, at 12:35 o'clock, until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

That the grilling of Conley was not to last many more hours, at his hands at least, was indicated by Attorney Rosser just before the resumption of court Tuesday afternoon, in a remark to a newspaper man: "I'm about through with him."

A number of spectators sat through the noon recess in the court room, preferring that to risking their seats by gaoing out to lunch.

Frank, the accused, and his wife, sat in an ante-room of the court and lunched together. A few moments before court was due to convene, they sent out for soft drinks.

Judge Roan stated before the trial began that he would permit the members of the jury to remove their coats at the afternoon session on account of the heat.

Facts in Nature

FOR centuries it has been known that Nature's most valuable health giving agents for the cure of disease are found in our American forests. Over forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y., used the powdered extracts as well as the liquid extracts of native medicinal plants, such as Bloodroot and Queen's root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Cherry bark and Mandrake, for the cure of blood diseases. This prescription as put up in liquid form was called

Sign of summer: the fiction numbers.

At any rate, the Atlanta team will beat Birmingham.

The Southern Merchants.

The Southern Merchants' convention which begins in Atlanta today is an especially vital and far-reaching influence for the South's economic welfare. Among its visitors, who are expected to number several thousand, every State in this great agricultural region is represented, and distinctly so, for these men come fresh from the daily issues of banking and farming as well as mercantile affairs. They, if any one, know the South's business problems and business opportunities. They have gathered to take counsel concerning their common interests, and in so doing they will strike new light and open new paths through all those questions which bear upon the South's material development.

A visit to these meetings will be peculiarly valuable to every merchant who is so fortunate as to attend them; the subjects to be discussed relate directly to matters that concern the success of merchandizing in its widest range and its minutest details. The convention will be, indeed, a wonderful school, where varied experience will teach a thousand good lessons and where, through an interchange of views, new ideas will be generated.

Not only to the individual merchant, but also to the general interests of the South, this convention will be richly profitable. Foremost among the larger questions to be considered is that of the need and means for encouraging a greater home production of food crops. And just there lies the most urgent problem of Georgia and of every other Southern State. So long as cotton remains our one and only money crop, we cannot hope to attain that measure of business freedom and prosperity to which our natural resources entitle us. The welfare of the farmer, the manufacturer, the banker and of every consumer as well as every merchant demands that the South produce a greater variety and abundance of the necessaries of life.

By turning their thought and effort to this paramount problem, our merchants will benefit not only themselves, but all other interests as well; and because they stand midway between the sources of supply and demand, because their business brings them into intimate touch with the farmer and the public at large, they are especially well circumstanced to take the lead in this important task. Atlanta is honored and fortunate to have as its guests so numerous and representative a body of Southern citizens. The Journal conveys the sentiment of this entire community when it bids them a most cordial welcome and wishes them a convention that will be fruitful of much good to every visitor and to the South as a whole.

We'll also soon know whether the persimmon crop has made good.

They'll have to revise "all quiet on the Potomac" and make it the canal.

The Child Labor Bill.

There are cheering omens that there will be enacted at this session of the Legislature a child labor law in keeping with the social conscience and the social welfare of Georgia. A well-considered bill which has been favorably reported by the proper committee both in the House and the Senate is now awaiting passage. It is indorsed by the State child labor committee, by the National child labor committee, by the organized working people of the State and also by the manufacturers themselves. There seems, indeed, to be no difference of opinion or purpose among those who have studied this measure advisedly as to its practical wisdom and justice. It is to be hoped, therefore, that every well-wisher for the cause of child labor reform, and the vast field of human interests it involves, will rally to the support of the pending bill and urge its prompt enactment.

Georgia's lack of adequate legislation in this regard has heretofore clouded her good name; more than that, it has impeded her material and educational progress. It is particularly pleasing to know that the mill owners themselves, realizing that in the long run their particular as well as public interests will profit by a law which protects the rights of the child, have given this bill their generous approval. Surely, then, there is no need of reminding the General Assembly that legislation of this character, concerning as it does the welfare of the home and the progress of the community as well as the freedom of individuals, should be given right of way. There was never a more seasonable hour for the enactment of a satisfactory child labor law in Georgia; let it be pressed speedily to consummation.

Ambassador Wilson's vacation problem has been neatly solved by the administration.

The cut in express rates is another evidence of a reduction in the high cost of living.

Now that the South American revolution is bobbing up again, we feel confident that the world is returning to a peaceful state.

The Outlook for Fiscal Reform.

The outlook for an effective measure of tax reform, whereby the State's progress will be assured and justice will be done all counties and all citizens, grows distinctly more promising. The bill passed by the House, though manifestly insufficient to the needs of the time, affords a basis and starting point for constructive legislation in the Senate. The Senate is fortunately free from those sharply drawn conflicts of opinion which severed the House. It seems agreed almost as a unit as to the general course that must be followed in solving the State's fiscal problems. It should thus be able to harmonize such differences as are honestly entertained and to evolve a measure that will be satisfactory to a majority of the House members.

The opposition to a State board of tax equalization has arisen in part, no doubt, from misapprehensions as to the real purpose and the logical results of such a board: We have never believed that the rights or the interests of any county would be imperiled by a well-considered plan of State supervision. The Senate can supply safeguards in this particular, however, that should reassure the most fearsome.

In the meantime, the Senate does well to reduce appropriations to a level of anticipated revenues. The house appropriations bill calls for the expenditure of two hundred and eighty thousand dollars in excess of the State's calculable income. So unbusinesslike and dangerous a policy should not be suffered to prevail. Until an adequate fiscal system, assuring an increase in revenues, is adopted, appropriations mut be cut.

We hereby petition our bank to borrow some of that $50,000,000 and pass it along.

It is getting along near enough to Christmas to make the reduction in express rates timely.

President Wilson is compelled to keep bach, but then he has a pretty faithful cook.

Somehow a woman's voice is always the sweetest to a man she loves and to another woman whom she she hates.

An Incomparable Wealth Producer.

If a State were given its choice between a hundred gold mines and an up-to-date agricultural college, it would undoubtedly be the part of practical wisdom to take the college; for, the wealth-producing power of such an institution is unlimited both in variety and extent. It is a continually creative force, drawing riches from the sun and soil, scattering new treasure along every path of business and placing directly within the people's reach the ideas and opportunities for steady good fortune.

We hear much today of the great food harvests of Kansas. The promised wheat crop of that State is pointed out as one of the brightest omens of a prosperous autumn. This abundant yield of wheat is traceable directly to the patient work and the growing influence of Kansas' system of agricultural education. It required years of "teaching and talk," as one observer remarks, to drive home the value and importance of scientific methods on the farm, "but at last, when actual crop yields showed beyond a doubt the value of science, its principles and practices have been adopted."

Western Kansas presents a particularly striking example of what agricultural education can accomplish. The lands in that section of the State were notoriously poor, but deep plowing, combined with intensive methods and in some instances with irrigation, have transformed them to teeming acres. "The western counties," we are told by a writer who has recently studied conditions there, "have increased their wheat acreage until now they rival the eastern part of the State. There are six million acres of wheat sown in Kansas, with an average of twelve bushels to the acre. But the farmers are not satisfied with that small average, and they have been applying the methods of the college to their work, with the result that next year will see the acre figures greatly increased. Scientific methods are the chief secret of the phenomenal yields now seen in the western counties—yields which will average from twenty-five to thirty bushels, and in some cases will reach forty to fifty bushels to the acre."

The Kansas college of agriculture has accomplished much in the teeth of circumstances which are naturally adverse. This it has been enabled to do largely through liberal financial support. What may not Georgia's State College of Agriculture accomplish in a region of natural fertility, if it is supported as it deserves to be? Our own college of agriculture has already achieved, and is still achieving, a vast deal for the development of farms and for the increased production of food supplies. Its quickening, constructive influence is felt the State around. It should be financed as generously as practical conditions will permit, for it is one of the great primal sources of the State's progress and prosperity.

PEARLS

By Frederic J. Haskin

Within the past few weeks the jewel interest of the world has centered in the great pearl necklace robbery occurring between London and Paris. A Paris jeweler sent to a London firm, by registered mail, a necklace consisting of sixty-one graduated pearls the total value of which was $625,000. When the case arrived in London the pearls were missing, and pieces of sugar were found in their place. The Scotland Yard detectives have been unable to secure a clew. In all probability the necklace will be divided and the pearls placed upon the market separately. To the average person the spending of more than a half million dollars upon a single piece of jewelry seems incredulous, yet pearls have for centuries played an important part of the world's history. Kingdoms have fallen and emperors have lost their heritages on account of pearls.

• • •

The pearl industries of the world produce millions of dollars in values each year, and pay a rich revenue in dues to the governments controlling them. Notwithstanding the fact that pearls are being secured in great quantities, each year the prices are increasing rather than diminishing because of the greater number of women who are desirous of possessing them. One pink pearl was found last year near Torres Strait which brought $80,000. Each month during the pearl fishing season pearls are found worth from $5,000 to $15,000. The most famous pearl formation discovered recently is called the "Southern Cross." It consists of nine pearls joined together in a perfect cross. It was found on a South Sea island by beachcombers who were superstitious and anxious to get rid of it. They sold it for $50. It afterward brought $50,000.

• • •

The greatest and oldest pearl fisheries of the world are on the island of Ceylon, and are under the direction of the English government. These pearl fisheries have been in operation at least 2,500 years. In recent years from 200 and 1000 vessels have been employed during the fishing season extending from February to May. As many as $1,000,000 pearl oysters have been taken at Ceylon during a single season. This included a yield of 4,000,000 oysters on several days, and 5,000,000 upon one day. This last constitutes the highest record. The prices at which Ceylon pearl oysters are bought from the divers range from $7.70 to $100 per thousand, according to their size and quality.

• • •

The pearl divers of Ceylon are considered the most skillful in the world, and their experiences have been exploited for centuries. In reality their dangers are less than those risked by pearl dvers in some other parts of the world, because the man eating sharks which infest some oyster banks are seldom if ever seen at Ceylon. The diver is let down from the boat by his helper. He usually remains in the water from sixty to ninety seconds, although occasionally one will be able to stand it from two to four minutes. When under water he clutches up whatever shells he can reach and places them in a basket.

• • •

It is difficult to extract pearls from fresh Ceylon oysters so the process of pearl gathering includes permitting the oyster to decompose before taking out the pearls. This method is repulsive enough to disgust any fair wearer of the jewels if she could watch them being prepared for her. The oysters are piled in a dug-out canoe and covered with matting for from seven to ten days. By this time little remains of the oyster but slime and shells and pearls. The canoe is flooded to the brim and the washing process begins. This requires the utmost delicacy of hunting pearls by X-ray and opened a curious establishment at Ipentiva, a pearl producing isand. The pearl mollusks are grouped in cases having a capacity of 100. They are passed before a radiograph at the rate of 360,000 per hour. If a pearl is found the oyster is opened at once. If a small pearl is shown the oyster is put out "to nurse" for another year. If no pearls are indicated the oyster is put into the reserve bank in the sea.

• • •

Although the Ceylon pearls are the best known in the world, other centers are yielding rich harvests of these gems. About 200 years ago pearls were discovered in Torres Strait between North Australia and New Guinea. The Dutch government controls these pearls, but has granted fishing concessions to an Australian company. The industry is carried on here differently from Ceylon. Two classes of divers are employed, the Malay and the Japanese. The Malays dive without clothing, and the Japanese have a sort of diving uniform including a straw helmet. There is great danger here from the man-eating sharks which infest the waters, their yawning jaws always ready for the unfortunate diver.

• • •

In addition to the natural pearls, great fortunes recently have been made, especially in Japan, by cultured pearls. This industry began in 1869 as a result of some experiments made in China. The process is now well established and operated extensively. The largest cultural banks are located along the shore of the Bay of Ago. They are operated by a special grant of the Japanese Government. The sea area covers twenty-nine nautical miles, and millions of pearls have been secured from it. The process consists of placing small stones and rocks where the oyster larvae are most abundant during the months of July and August. Tiny oysters are soon found attached to them. The stones are taken up and placed in deep water for three years. Then the oysters are removed from the sea and opened. A tiny piece of nacre, or a pearl shell, is placed in the mouth of each. The shells are then returned to the water for at least four years. The result is the development of some exceedingly fine pearls. Most of the marine work in this Japanese pearl culture is done by women who look most picturesque in their diving suits of pure white.

Millions of dollars' worth of pearls have been secured from fresh water mussels in America, although these are generally overlooked in the consideration of the pearl resources of the world. The first fine pearl secured in the United States is believed to have been the "Queen's Pearl," which was taken from Notch brook, near Paterson, N. J., about 1860. It weigned ninety-three grains and was sold to the Empress Eugenie for $2,500. It would be worth five times that much now, since the value of these jewels has greatly increased. A year later the largest pearl ever discovered here was found in the same brook, but it was ruined by being boiled. In 1876 some good pearls were found near Waynesville, Ohio. In the early 80's a sky-blue pearl was found in Tennessee which was sold in London for $3,500. The best price paid for a fresh water pearl in this country was $12,000, and this fine specimen also came from Tennessee. A Wisconsin pearl was sold in New York last year for $10,000. The original finder sold it for 75 cents because he did not know its value.

Georgia Sunshine Wins Eye Of Motion Picture Men

As far back as the memory of man travels the red old hills of Georgia have been famed in song and story. It has long been an acknowledged fact that the most beautiful women, the whitest cotton, the greenest corn and the sweetest of peaches flourished in the glorious sunshine of the Empire state. But it has remained for a Georgian to discover a new and altogether novel value of Georgia sunlight and one that may lead to an investment of no small amount of money in the city of Atlanta. Charles Morgan Seay is the man, and while he has lived in New York for a number of years, still claims Rome, the Hill City, of Georgia, as his home. Mr. Seay is one of the directing producers of Thomas A. Edison, Incporated, which is one of the many different enterprises of the wizard of electricity. This particular company is the maker of moving pictures. For several years large companies of high priced actors and much valuable working material have been sent to the coast because it was claimed the sunlight there was just suited for outdoor motion pictures. Mr. Seay tested the sunlight on the coast and other places before he said much about Georgia. When he had finished his tests he asked for permission to bring a company to the scenes of his boyhood. He came and recent productions made in Atlanta, Rome and other places near Atlanta have proven his claim. Just before returning to New York Mr. Seay declared Atlanta was the best place in the United States for the making of motion pictures. The same rays of the sun he said that made the cotton grow, that put the tint on the cheek of the peach and that made the grains of ripening corn glisten like pearls brought out with remarkable clearness and exactness every detail of the motion picture. The erection of large studios by some of the leading motion picture producers may follow his announcement in the near future.

Quips and Quiddities

Among the bewildered, and in some cases indignant, spectators gathered at the recent Futurist exhibition of painting and sculpture in Chicago was a young man from Springfield, in charge of a cousin who is "strong for" the new movement in art.

The youth remained silent during the view and the subsequent explanations of the new idea given him by his cousin.

"Well," said the latter finally, "you don't seem particularly enthusiastic about them. What do you think?"

"Think!" growled the youth from Springfield. "Why, I've got two aunts at home that can knit better pictures than those."

There is a young man in New York who is undoubtedly still wondering whether he has an unusually large foot or whether a certain German lady of generous dimensions from Jersey is troubled with nearsightedness.

The woman in question boarded a New York bound ferry boat with a big, heavy valise. Apparently much fatigued from her efforts, she threw herself into a seat, landing her bulky grip squarely upon the toes of a young man next to her. He responded with a look of suppressed rage and pain, and then shoved the valise aside, unnoticed by the woman.

A few moments later, when the ferry reached its slip, the young man was suddenly amazed to behold the stout lady fumbling about with her hand on his foot. Thoroughly aroused at this liberty, he was about to demand an explanation, when the woman, with a look of great embarrasment, exclaimed: "Ach! Excoose me it looked chust like mine bag."

The prosecution had a strong case against Paddy. His hat, which all the inhabitants could identify, had been found on the premises. Paddy, however, denied al knowledge of the headgear, and swore that he was not within a mile of the place at the time of the outrage. But so well did his witnesses corroborate his statement that he was able to prove an alibi.

Paddy was found "Not gullty," but seemed reluctant to leave the dock.

The magistrate, thinking he did not understand the verdict, explained: "Well, my man, you are discharged, you need not wait."

"If ye plaise, yer honor," replied Paddy, "I'm waiting for me hat."

A Batch of Smiles

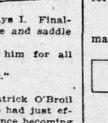
A "regular" from a western army post came home the other day on an extended furlough. Of course, he spent the first of the hour to his former east side companions.



"Yes," he remarked, cocking his foot comfortably on the rail in front of a Second avenue bar, "the way them Indians love whisky beats anything you ever saw. I once met a Cheyenne on his pony. 'Give me a drink of whisky; I'll give you my bridle for it,' says he. 'No,' says I. 'I'll give you my pony,' says he. 'No,' says I. Finally, if you believe it, he offered his bridle and saddle and pony all in a bunch for a drink!"

"Well, and wouldn't you give it to him for all that?" asked one of the crowd.

"Not much. I only had one drink left."

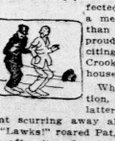
Although hot and exhausted, P. C. Patrick O'Broil felt not a little pleased with himself. He had just effected his first arrest since becoming a member of the force; and, more than that, an arrest certainly to be proud of. In short, after a long, exciting chase he had captured Tom Crooke, the notorious but elusive house breaker.



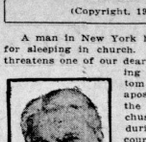
While he was marching to the station, however, with his prisoner, the latter's hat suddenly blew off and went scurring away along the street.

"Iawks!" roared Pat, a wise look on his face. "You run after it and not come back again? No, my lad, you stand here; I'll get your hat."

SLEEPING IN MEETING

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)



A man in New York has been condemned by court for sleeping in church. This high-handed proceeding threatens one of our dearest rights and privileges. Going to sleep in meeting is a custom that dates as far back as apostolic times, as we read in the book of Acts that one Eutychus was overcome with sleep during one of St. Paul's discourses, and fell out of the window, to the scandal of the brethren and the death of himself; and that the good preacher, so far from chiding the offender (which, seeing that he was dead as a hammer, would have been a work of supererogation), raised him to life by the kindly use of spiritual powers, and afterward pleasantly broke bread with him.

It would seem that this authoritative example of so great a minister should set a mark of clemency to be observed by all subsequent holders forth, and make clear the principle that drowsiness comes not from any heresy, contumacy, lewdness nor other of the devil his works, but from a pardonable weakness of the flesh, of the body, that frastile vessel in which even the loftiest zeal is so unstably enclosed.

But the matter may be pushed further, in the wise that church sleeping is not a weakness but an excellence. For it has been observed that as a rule it is the most orthodox and established souls who are overcome into nodding by the soothing sounds of the gospel. And these persons give as a reason for their doing that so great is their confidence in their priest or pastor that they sweetly pass on to slumber, having no cause to stay awake and watch the speaker lest he say something.

Little children also are peculiarly subject to the pangs of drowsihead, and the god Morpheus comes upon them as an armed man, so that they are quickly done for and curl up on mother's lap before the expounder has fairly begun; and surely of such, we are informed from the most unimpeachable source, is the kingdom of heaven.

To which two most persuasive arguments a third may be added that is not lightly to gainsay, towit: that for those suffering from insomnia no cure seems so certain as to go to some church where the doctor of divinity is known for his poppied style and narcotic unction. And I have known several who, accursed with wakefulness, have tried all manner of sedatives, sleeping powders, and somenific drugs, have employed opiaseurs and readers, have experimented now with quiet and again with alarms, have counted sheep, and have repeated the golden texts of the highest priced mental healers, and all to no avail; yet who have been miraculously cured and have slipped easily into hypnotic vacuity upon hearing Dr. Dryasdust only begin to expound.

Take it by and large, the case lies strongly against the bumptious magistrate who fined the sleeper. He has wantonly departed from the best traditions and shown himself to be devold of common humanity to boot.

Besides, I myself when young knew a good old deacon who regularly slept through the service, snored loudly, and usually lost his wig; and surely in this dull world whoso provides diversion for the young has helped along.

Curtailing the Small Boy's Liberty

(Life.)

What shall be said of the inhuman motor car manufacturer who has recently succeeded in concealing the button which sounds the motor car horn in such a way that it cannot be pressed by the small boy who hovers near? If this invention becomes universal, consider what an effect it is bound to have upon the character of this boy! And is not the American small boy the hope of the Nation?

Time was when the activities of small boys went out in the direction of stealing apples and watermelons; but owing to the civilizing influence of the cities and for other reasons, this source of joy—this perfectly proper moral vent to every small boy's nature—has been largely cut off. What might have happened to him? How far in the scale of human progress this boy would naturally have deteriorated, we cannot say.

But just in the nick of time the motor car was invented, giving him a chance to sound the horn; and thus the spirit of invention—that notable fount of wickedness and daring in every boy's makeup—came to its expression, and he has been saved.

Motor cars stand everywhere, and if you—oh sober minded and dignified adu.—have never in passing one felt within your heart the sudden impulse to jump into it, and with fiendish exultation sound the horn, then look to yourself, for there is something morally the matter with you.

We sincerely hope, therefore, that this particular inventor will hold his invention so close that it may be confined only to one machine among the thousands in use.

Every boy is entitled not only to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiess, but also to sound the horn of any machine upon which he may happen to stray. This is one of his inalienable rights as an American ci..zen.

COUNCIL WANTS CHARTER PASSED WITHOUT CHANGE

Alderman McClelland Tenders Resignation, Which Is Accepted

General council passed a resolution Monday afternoon requesting the Fulton county representatives and the Thirty-fifth district senator to pass the new Atlanta charter bill just as council drew it, without change or amendment.

The particular amendments objected to by council are, first, the amendment striking from the charter the initiative, referendum and recall; and, second, the amendment reducing the power of the recorder.

These amendments were made while the bill was in the hands of the house committee to which it was referred, and were made at the instance of R. B. Blackburn and John Y. Smith, of the Fulton delegation. Senator Hule is now opposing, in the senate, the amendment reducing the recorder's power.

Council's resolution declares that unless the charter is passed as council drew it, council would rather not have it passed at all.

John E. McClelland tendered his resignation Monday afternoon as alderman from the Second ward, and council accepted it. The alderman resigns because he has moved to Stone Mountain. He will continue to practice law in the city, however, having formed a partnership with his son, John S. McClelland.

Acting under a charter amendment which gives council the right to fill vacancies by death, resignation and otherwise, council called upon the two Second ward councilmen to nominate a successor to Alderman McClelland, and they offered the name of Fletcher A. Quillian, chairman of the bond commission. Mr. Quillian declined. It was then announced by the Second ward councilmen that a meeting of Second ward citizens will be held Thursday night at McCord's store, corner of Georgia avenue and South Prpor street, to agree upon a successor, who will be nominated by the Second ward delegation and elected by council.

Council reversed the action of the board of health in allowing the Destructor company to use a cheaper grade of window glass in the new crematory than the specifications call for.

The recommendation of a conference committee that $150 be appropriated to purchase an automobile for City Electrician R. C. Turner was adopted.

Several street paving contracts were awarded at the figures recommended by the street committee.

Dr. R. N. Weaver was elected to the health board to succeed W. W. Hildebrand, and W. H. Terrell was elected a member of the board of education from the First ward to succeed W. O. Stamps.

J. J. CRAWFORD IS EXONERATED BY SHERIFF

DeKalb Official Certifies His Innocence in Matter of Scottdale Robbery

Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb county, has issued a formal statement in which he reiterates that J. J. Crawford, who was arrested in connection with the recent safe robbery at Scottdale, is entirely innocent and has been released from custody.

This fact was stated in The Journal shortly after Mr. Crawford's release, but several of Mr. Crawford's acquaintances who saw the original account of his arrest have not seen the account of his exoneration. For this reason The Journal is repeating the facts about his release.

The sheriff's statement is as follows: "This is to certify that J. J. Crawford was arrested on suspicion of being the man who blew the Scottdale safe, but after a thorough investigation all suspicion was cleared and he was released."

Mr. Crawford was held but an hour or so when his innocence was established.

NEW APPOINTMENTS BY COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

The finance committee amended the June apportionment sheet Monday morning by dividing an additional $13,220.74 as follows:

For building intersecting sewer near the Atlanta Steel company's plant, $6,000; remodeling old Crew Street school for occupancy by the English-Commercial High school, $1,500; additional DeKalb avenue paving, $5,220.74; for construction of small building at crematory inspector, $100.

The additional funds came through the increased estimate of taxes, $6,973.24; from DeKalb county for paving, $2,000, and through a suit settled in favor of the city, $4,247.50.

The necessity for building the sewer near the steel company's plant also arose through a suit instituted against the city. Although the case was decided in favor of the city, the court ruled that the city would be liable for damages in the future unless the nuisance is abated.

Jim Conley's Memory Proved Bad Under Cross-Examination

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser's Gentle Manner Failed to Entrap the Negro, Who in a Close Place Always Fell Back on "I Disremember"

Luther Rosser Monday afternoon pleaded with Jim Conley.

"Jim, can't you remember?" urged Mr. Rosser plaintively. "Just think again, Jim."

"Well, mebbe if you reads it out, Mr. Rosser. My memory's bad."

Mr. Rosser had another look at the written statement from which he was questioning Jim. Mr. Rosser rubbed his hand over the top of his head. Mr. Rosser sighed in a gusty fashion.

"Jim, you know we're great friends, and we're going to get along fine together. But, Jim, can't you remember anything you said?"

"Well, Mr. Rosser, mebbe I can if you reads 'em out."

Judge Broyles has seen witnesses exactly like Jim—negroes who seem to fit in with the police court atmosphere.

Their memory is ready when memory is convenient, but memory halts when discretion says that uncertainty would be the better course. That's how it was with Jim.

MR. ROSSER PLEADS.

For the time being Mr. Rosser rubbed his head and pleaded. He has taken others witnesses as though they were atoms of humanity and rolled them, as it were, between the finger and thumb of his wit.

But he talked plaintively to Jim Conley.

"Won't you please remember, Jim?"

"Well, if you jes reads 'em to me, Mr. Rosser—"

Reading was just what Mr. Rosser refused to do. His purpose was to test Jim's memory—perhaps, to confound Jim by a comparison of his oral statements upon the stand with his written statements.

But Jim's memory halted and stumbled and failed completely like a worn out animal. It refused to bring his thoughts to those written statements to which Mr. Rosser returned the testimony again and again. If they were read, then Jim could say whether or not they were of his utterance. Otherwise—

"My memory's pretty poor, Mr. Rosser. I remembers some things, and some things I disremembers."

Mr. Rosser rubbed his hand over his head.

"All right, Jim," he said gently. "All right. We'll do the best we can."

There was that in Mr. Rosser's voice which almost roused the sympathy of the court room. His cross-examinations had heretofore been so robust and vigorous. But during Monday afternoon Jim's memory tempered the attorney's tone to a gentle inquiry and gave it a slightly plaintive inflection.

"You didn't heistate a minute when you were telling about the murder, Jim," pointed out Mr. Rosser, not accusingly; but just for Jim's information. "And now you disremember everything."

The court room had noticed that. Jim's accusation Monday morning that Frank murdered Mary Phagan came from his lips so nimbly, so glibly, that his words tumbled out, one upon another. Jim was cautioned to speak slower. So sure was he of all he had to tell that his utterance was too quick for the jury to understand. No more direct, quick, detailed testimony was ever given than that of Jim on Monday morning.

JIM FORGETS.

But queer enough, Jim forgot everything by afternoon—everything except what he had told the jury in the morning.

Then he had remembered minute details. But he found, when he began to search his memory in the afternoon, that he had forgotten much which was incidental to the murder and had no part in his morning's story.

This misfortune of his put the plaintive note into Mr. Rosser's voice. Mr. Rosser's tone went from fierce to facile. Other witnesses had found questions hurled at their heads by him. Jim discovered that, during Monday afternoon at least, Mr. Rosser nature contained a vein of meekness. Jim found the milk of human kindness in the makeup of the defense attorney. Jim showed the court that roses of soft speech sometimes mingle even with the sharpest thorns of cross-examination.

Mr. Rosser wheedled, he cajoled, he pleaded with Jim. But he met with no success. The memory which failed at every turn was a defense for the negro through which the attorney could not break. Little if any success was had Monday afternoon in confusing Jim.

When he spoke, he spoke glibly, but the burden of his answer was:

"Well, if you reads 'em out to me, Mr. Rosser, mebbe I can tell."

And Mr. Rosser would rub his head and say:

"Jim, can't you remember anything?"

The "Blue Tag" Sale brings practically the entire stock of this huge furniture store (only contract-price furniture excepted) at honest and out-and-out savings that are possible at no other season.

And the quality of the furniture the same now as it was when our buyers, experience-trained experts, chose it as the best that they could buy in the great furniture centers of America to sell at regular prices.

Backed by such quantities of quality furniture, we are justified in calling it the classic furniture event of the year. But these are only the broad and true generalities.

Investigate the particulars---the little blue tags on nearly every separate piece of furniture that fills the store, make a few comparisons, you will KNOW then.

Negro Sweeper Remanded to Solitude in Jail Over Night

Jim Conley Grilled for Many Hours By Frank's Attorney Who Fails to "Rattle" Him

Luther Rosser Makes Negro Admit Lies and Terms in Prison, but Sweeper Remains Good Witness for State—Women Excluded From Court Room During Afternoon Session. Numerous Tilts Between Opposing Counsel Marked With Bitterness.

The afternoon session of the Frank trial was marked by many tilts between the solicitor and his assistant with counsel for the defense and toward the end of the session much bitterness was injected into the remaining various members of opposing counsel. Judge Roan decided with Frank's counsel, after vigorous protests by Solicitor Dorsey on the manner in which attorney Rosser was questioning the witness, Jim Conley, that the negro was entitled to counsel.

The court was excused, shortly before court adjourned for the day at 5:30 o'clock, after Attorney Arnold, for the defense, asked the court to have Conley spend the night in solitude where the prosecution could not talk with him. He contended that the examination of the negro is only half completed and that it would be unfair for the state's agents to converse with them. To his request the solicitor acquiesced and stated to the court that he hoped the prisoner would be safeguarded from any others reaching him. Judge Roan remanded the prisone rto the custody of Sheriff Mangum and ordered a special guard put over the witness during the night, allowing none to talk with him.

The only important development during the afternoon was the admission by Conley under cross-examination, that he had served seven terms in jail.

The afternoon examination of the negro Jim Conley at the afternoon session, Attorney Rosser, for the defense, asked:

"On the second Saturday Jim how much did you draw?"

"I don remember."

"Did you draw it yourself or did somebody draw it for you?"

"I don't remember."

"The third time you watched for him, how much money did you draw?"

"I couldn't tell about that."

"Well, Thanksgiving week, did you draw money before or after Thanksgiving?"

"I've got no memory there."

"What did you draw the day after Thanksgiving?"

"I came back to work."

"How much time did you make?"

"I don't remember."

"The day before Thanksgiving how many hours did you work?"

"I don't remember."

"Where did you see that day?"

"I don't remember. I saw Mr. Frank, though."

"The negro did not remember whether or not he saw the two forladies who worked on the office floor. Mr. Rosser started with Thanksgiving day, and told the negro to go backwards and tell him how much he got for working on Saturdays. The negro said he got $1.25 for watching on Thanksgiving day, 75 cents on the previous Saturday that he watched, and 50 cents on the two preceding occasions. The negro said that he did not remember anything about his regular work on those days.

"Where were you living in December, 1912?"

"At 37-B Vine street."

"When was it you got in prison?"

"September."

"How long did you stay?"

"Three or four days."

The negro said that he couldn't tell what day he got in or what day he got out of prison. Answering questions, the negro said his "woman" moved while he was in prison to 172 Rhodes street. He admitted that he was not married to the woman, whose name he gave as Loreno. He said he had been living with her for two and a half years.

"Whom did you live with before?"

"At my mother's house."

"Haven't you had any other woman?"

"Not regular, just sweethearts."

"The negro said that Lorena had two boys and a girl, the oldest being ten years old.

SECOND TERM IN JAIL.

"Where were you in jail next time?"

"I don't remember."

"Before Christmas, or after?"

"Before."

"What month?"

"I don't remember."

"Well, Jim, how long were you in this last time?"

"About thirty or thirty-one days."

"And you don't know whether it was December, November or October, do you?"

"No, sir."

"Was it cold or hot weather?"

"I can't say exactly."

"You know the first time you were in was September? Can't you fix it by that?"

"Well, it wasn't in November or December."

THREE TIM..S IN JAIL.

"Then it must be in October. You've been in jail three times since you worked at the pencil factory, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"How many times in the last five years?"

"Three."

Seven or eight times, I think."

"You can't remember the first time you were in jail, can you?"

"No, sir."

Attorney Rosser questioned him in detail about the first, second, and fourth time he was in jail, and Conley said that he could not fix the time that had been sent to jail for the length of his terms.

FRANK JOLLEYED HIM.

The fifth time he was in jail, he said, was sometime in 1911, but questioning Attorney Rosser failed to get the month. The sixth time, he said, was last September. Once after September, he said, he couldn't remember the month.

SEVEN TERMS IN JAIL.

"As a matter of fact, you don't know how many times you were in jail, do you, Jim?"

"Well, I think it was seven times."

"Then you don't mean five or six times?"

"No, sir. I mean seven."

"Let's go back a little. The day you said you found the child dead was April 26. You knew there was no work on the factory?"

"Yes, sir, there was signs posted up all around."

"Could you read them?"

"No, sir."

"How did you know what they said?"

"Well, Mr. Campbell and Snowball read them to me."

"What day was it they read 'em to you?"

"I don't remember."

"You couldn't read them, could you?"

"I didn't try."

"Well, who read the sign to you first?"

"Mr. Campbell."

"Well, then, how did Snowball come to read it to you?"

"I didn't ask him to. I was just riding up on the elevator and he read it to me."

"How did you come to be on the elevator?"

"I had to go down in the basement after my lunch."

"Now, take the fourth floor, Jim. You can come right down the stairway to the second floor, can't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Anybody could come down those stairs and go all over the second floor, couldn't they?"

"No, sir. There's some iron doors going into the metal room."

"Well, they're not shut, are they, always?"

"I don't know."

"You've never looked at the lock on the door, then, have you?"

"No, sir."

"You've worked all over the factory, haven't you?"

"Well, I never worked in the metal department."

Conley proceeded, saying that he had swept out other portions of the second floor during the time he had worked there, but never had swept the metal department.

BEEN IN METAL ROOM.

"Then you have never been in there, have you?"

"Oh, yes, sir; I've been in there."

"On the left side of the second floor there's a long dark room isn't there?"

"Yes, sir."

"You've been back where the men's closets and the women's closets are, haven't you?"

"No, sir. I've been to Mr. Quinn's room, though."

"Well, how far away from the toilet is that?"

"Not far."

"Where is the plating room?"

"I don't know."

"Isn't it off to the left of the metal room?"

"I don't know."

"Well, where is the storage room?"

"I don't know. I never was in there."

"And you never were on the left side of the building back from the metal room?"

"No, sir."

"You never was on the left side?"

"No, sir."

"Quinn's office is over there, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir, but I never was in it. I've just been to the office."

"Have you been over there where they washed the lead?"

"No, sir."

"Well outside the time you went to Quinn's office and the time you sprinkled the disinfectants, have you been any other left hand side of the factory?"

"I've never been in the ladies' toilet."

"That's not what I'm asking you. You say say you've been in the long dark room on the left hand side?"

"I didn't say anything about the long dark room."

"Didn't you say you never had been in the left side except to disinfect the toilets and poke bills into ujph's office?"

"I've been where they washed the lead."

"I thought you said you never saw the place where they washed the lead?"

"No, sir, I didn't say that. The negro described the place where the lead is washed, stating that some had cold water in them and others contained hot water.

"All right, then; so you went over to disinfect and you poked bills into Quinn's office, and you went and sprinkled where they washed the lead?"

"I didn't say I sprinkled where they washed the lead. I went there to wash overalls."

"Outside of these three times, have you ever been over on the left hand side of the factory in your life?"

"Yes, sir, I went back where the dark place was."

"When you told me a moment ago you hadn't been back there?"

"You asked me if I went back to get that, didn't you?"

"Did you ever go back there for any purpose?"

"I don't know."

"When was the last time you went back there?"

"When I went to get a piece of cloth for Mr. Frank."

"Didn't you clean up back there?"

"No, sir. I stacked some boxes back there and took out some boxes that the rats had torn up."

"Tell me how many times have you been back there?"

"I don't know."

The witness said that he thought that the last time he went back there was before Christmas, but he didn't remember when. Conley interrupted the cross-examination by asking for a glass of water, which a deputy sheriff furnished to him.

DEFENSE CONFERS.

Attorneys Rosser and Arnold left the court at this juncture and went into the solicitor's private room. They returned in about five minutes. By his method of examination, Attorney Rosser made it clear that he had settled down to a long endurance test. Conley seemed, too, to know that he was a speaking marathon, and was slower and more guarded than he was at first.

Mr. Rosser continued questioning the negro on every subject. He tried to get a description from the negro of Frank's private office and the outer office, but elicited little from Conley. The negro said, however, that there were two desks in the private office, one of which was used by Frank and the other usually by Luther Schiff. The negro didn't know whether the big safe, when its door was open, shut out the view from Frank's private office.

The negro said that when any one came up the steps and went by the clock they could be seen from Frank's private office, and any one standing at the head of the stairs could see inside. Attorney Rosser exhibited a blueprint of the factory, and asked Conley to point on it the point where he swears he was standing when he claims Frank first asked him to help get rid of Mary.

FRANK UNCONCERNED.

For the first time since the trial commenced, Frank and Mrs. Frank did not appear to be taking a very keen interest in the proceedings, but laughed and talked with one another a few times.

The negro admitted, under questions, that a Miss Willis, who was a forelady on the second floor, could have seen Frank talking with himself on the stairs. The attorney questioned him minutely about the arrangement of the fourth floor.

Conley gave evidences of getting nervous, and continually licked his lips.

On direct examination Conley first talked to him about watching, he remembered going by the clocks, because one of the witnesses, Holloway, asked he called Mr. Holloway's attention to them. The negro had at first said that he passed the clock at 10 minutes past, but later said he was not sure about the punching, though he remembered perfectly talking to Holloway about the time.

"How much did you drink on Friday?"

"I don't remember. I had a few beers in the evening."

"Did you know Harry Scott? He goes around with Black."

"Yes, sir, I know him."

ADMITS DISCREPANCIES.

"Now at the station house, just after you were arrested, you told them you got up at 9 o'clock Saturday, didn't you? That wasn't true, was it?"

"No, sir."

"What time did you eat breakfast, Saturday morning?"

"I ate about 7:30."

"Well, you didn't tell Scott that did you, first time?"

"No, sir."

"You told him you left home that morning about 10 o'clock. That wasn't true, was it?"

"No, sir."

"You told them you went to Peters the first time you were expecting to enter an objection here," said he.

"I didn't think you'd have the gall to do it," said Mr. Rosser.

Attorney Hooper stated his objection, arguing that if the defense wanted to impeach Conley's testimony they were required to let him read or read to him these affidavits.

Attorney Arnold answered the argument. "Your honor, you can see that a witness like this, who has been canned, coaxed and kept by a chosen few, has to be questioned with extreme delicity if he is to be impeached." In the course of his argument he said: "I don't doubt that he made four or five lying narratives about this murder with just as straight a face as he is now telling it to the jury."

Solicitor Dorsey said that Attorney Arnold had made a statement which there was no evidence to support, and that the statement ought not to be allowed in the record. He then cited an authority to prove that any writing by which it is intended to impeach the witness must be shown to the witness before he is questioned on it or must be read to him. He said that the remarks made by Mr. Arnold were prejudicial and improper, and he wanted the court to instruct the jury to that effect.

Attorney Arnold arose. He remarked that Solicitor Dorsey, in his usual street. Is that true?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long did you stay on Peters street?"

"I don't know. It wasn't very long, though."

"You bought a pint of whisky there, didn't you?"

"No, sir; I bought a half pint."

"The truth about this matter is, Jim, that you don't know anything about this thing that you can't tell what you did tell, can you?"

CAN'T TELL TRUTH ALWAYS.

"No, sir; I can't tell wether it's true or not."

"Isn't it the truth, Jim, that you made one verbal statement at the police station and after that made three affidavits, and none of them was true?"

"No, sir; some is true," said the negro.

"Is the last one true?"

"Most of it."

"What part of it?"

Attorney Hooper objected. "I guess "fussy, snarling counsel" interposed an objection. In his argument he said that the defense intended to show that each of the four "pipe dream" confessions the murder given by Conley was preceded by pumping by the detectives. "We expect to show by more than one and more than two weeks before he ever made any statement, and we purpose showing that he lied and said he didn't know anything about the crime, until confronted by his handwriting."

Judge Roan asked what the question was.

Attorney Rosser proceeded.

PUTS NEW QUESTION.

"At the conversation on May 18, 1913, between you and Detectives Black and Scott, how long had you been in jail?"

"Eighteen days I reckon. I was arrested the first of May."

"On that day, how long did they talk to you before you admitted knowing anything?"

"Not long. I sent for Mr. Black that day."

"On that day you were just talking to Scott and Black?"

"Yes, sir."

"You didn't make an affidavit?"

"I think so."

"It was just a statement you made?"

"It was some kind of something."

"The first time you talked of your movements o nthat Saturday, you didn't send for Black, did you?"

"The first time I sent for Mr. Black was when I began telling."

"Didn't you talk before that about when you got up, went to Peters street, got some liquor?"

"Yes, sir."

"You didn't send for anybody then?"

"It seems to me like I sent for Mr. Black."

"You may be mistaken?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where were you when you made this statement to Scott and Scott?"

"Upstairs in the detective rooms."

"Who else was there?"

"Nobody."

"How long did they talk to you before you made that statement? Three or four hours?"

"No, sir, not that long."

WHEN HE WROTE.

"Hadn't you told them before that time that your name was Jim?"

"I had done some writing in the chief's office that Sunday."

"What Sunday?"

"I don't know."

"Before you made any statement?"

"Yes, sir, about two days."

"Didn't you tell Black and Scott that you bought half a pint of whisky on Peters street at 10 o'clock?"

"No, sir, I told Mr. Black about 10:30."

"Well, that was not so, was it?"

"No, sir."

"Didn't you tell him you left Rhodes street at 10:30?"

"I don't remember,—that was three months ago. I can't keep everything in my mind."

"And can'tyou remember three months ago?"

"Not everything."

"How much did you tell them you paid for the liquor?"

"Forty cents. That's what I always pay for a half pint."

"Where did you tell them you went?"

Before Mr. Rosser could conclude his question, Mr. Hooper arose and said:

HOOPER PROTESTS.

"Your honor, we have no objection to all the voluminous statements, affidavits, and everything going before the jury. This line of questioning here can only be for the purpose of impeachment. This being true, is it not right to ask a question about 'Did you not tell so and so at such and such a time?' That's not a proper question. The law prescribes a way for the cross-examination of a witness on a point like this, and the witness has a right to be examined as the law directs. He may ask the witness 'Did you not on such a time and place, say so and so?' But I submit that he cannot ask the witness what the witness said to somebody else on such occasion."

Attorney Rosser inquired of the court, "Is it to be said that I can't ask this witness what he told a man at a given time?"

Attorney Hooper then read the code to show how a witness could be impeached. "The foundation must first be laid," read Mr. Hooper, "and the question must be put as to whether or not the witness made such a statement at such a time and place."

Jude Roan ruled that the witness was the state's witness, and that the defense had the right on cross-examination to test his memory.

"That's all true, your honor," said Mr. Hooper, "but the law prescribes how a witness' memory may be tested, and I would like my friend Rosser to inform me from what page he is reading."

ROSSER IS ANGERED.

"I'm not going to enlighten him or the witness, either!" snapped Mr. Rosser.

Judge Roan ruled that the defense had a right to ask these questions, not for the purpose of impeachment, but to test the witness' memory.

"Does your honor hold that this examination is not for the purpose of impeachment?" asked Mr. Hooper.

"I don't know what it will result in," replied the court, "but I am going to permit the defense to test the memory of the witness."

have made to Scott and Black on May 18. Mr. Rosser termed this "his first statement."

"Didn't you say that after you bought some liquor at 11 o'clock you went to some other saloon?"

"I don't remember saying anything about 11 o'clock, but I told them I went to Early's saloon."

"Well, didn't you tell them you went to the Butt-In saloon after that?"

"I can't remember what I told, but I went to the Butt-In saloon before I bought the liquor."

"Then yo utold some things that were not true, did you?"

"Yes, sir."

DIDN'T WANT TO TELL.

"Well, how do you let anybody know, Jim, when you're telling the truth and when you're telling the truth?"

"Well, sometimes I hang my head. I know I am telling all the truth then," said the negro, turning toward the jury. "I just didn't want to give the man away, because he'd been good to me."

"What did you tell them you did in the Butt-In saloon?"

"I don't know what I told 'em I did there, but I won 90 cents shooting dice. And then I went to another saloon and bought some beer."

"Now, Jim, didn't you tell them you bought the beer there?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you have a scrap in the eye?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you tell 'em about buying wine?"

"I don't remember."

"From Peters streeet did you go straight hom?"

"I disremember."

"What time was it that you sent the little girl for the pan sauce?"

"I don't remember that."

"Isn't it a fact that after some beer at 3 o'clock, didn't you? And it was after that that you sent the girl for the sauce pan?"

"It was after I had come back," answered the witness."

"How much money did you tell them that you had?"

"I don't remember, but I think about $3.50."

"Didn't you deny to them that you were at the factory at all that day, and try to show them where you were?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you hang your head?"

WHEN HE'S LYING.

"I disremember.—Now, I didn't look em straight in the eye like I'm looking you."

"Yes, Jom. I know you're looking me in the eye. What detective told you to?"

"Nory detective. I'm telling the truth."

"Jim, what are some of your other lying habits?"

"Well, I was talking to them sometimes I played with my ngers."

"Wouldn't one detective cuss you out and call you a rascal, and say 'he thought he was guilty, and the other say 'I don't believe he did it?'"

"No, sir, they never cussed me out."

"Well, when Mr. Black your friend, and didn't Scott pretend to think you was guilty?"

"No, sir."

"Well, what did they have you in the detectives' office for, all those times, three or four days on end at a stretch, if they weren't pumping you?"

"They tried to get me to tell it all at once."

"Didn't they have another negro in the cell with you down at police station?"

"There was one in there once, for two days."

"Didn't you tell him the detectives were mad at you?"

"No, sir, he never asked me anything. He didn't even know what I was in there for."

"Well, you knew why he was in there, didn't you?"

In an aside to Mr. Hooper and Solicitor Dorsey Mr. Rosser said: "Of course, I can go for him with both feet. oYu've had your enlightening day. Now I'm going to have mine."

"No, sir, he cried most of the time."

ROSSER INTERRUPTS.

"Tell me if it was you sent for Black on May 24?"

"Well, I wanted to tell something. I hadn't heard from Mr. F—"

Mr. Rosser asked another question at him. Solicitor Dorsey objected to the interruption. "I submit, your honor, the witness has a right to make his own answers. He said he had heard nothing from Frank, and he was waiting for some word in accordance with Frank's promise."

The attorieys argued. The argument simmered down to nothing without a ruling from the bench.

Conley went on and told that after he had sent word to Black that he wanted to talk with him Black said, "Wait a minute. I'll be back down in a minute." He said that Black went upstairs and returned in about fifteen minutes with Scott, and that the two detectives then took him upstairs. "On the way up, said Conley, he told the detectives that he was ready to tell some of it, but that he would hold back the rest.

"Did they read you what you said?"

Solicitor Dorsey objected. Mr. Rosser withdrew the question, adding, "I'll bring it in later. I don't blame my friend for objecting. A man who got all this ought to snicker."

You told Black you were going to tell part of the truth and hold back part of the truth?"

"Yes, sir."

"What Scott there when you told this to Black?"

"I didn't see him. I told Mr. Black wwhen he was taking me out of the cell to take me upstairs."

"When they were writing down your statement, did you tell them that you were going to tell part of the truth and hold back part of it?"

"They didn't ask me, and I didn't tell them anything about it."

"Did you tell them you were going to lie about it?"

"No, sir."

"This second time, didn't you tell the detectives that about four minutes to 1 Mr. Frank came up the aisle and asked you to come to his office?"

"Yes, sir. I told them that."

"Then what?"

I TELL ABOUT NOTES.

"I told them I wen into the office and Mr. Frank asked me if I could write some. I said I could write a little. Then I said he handed me a tab and told me write. He said he had some people in Brooklyn and he would send it up to them and tell them I was a good negro."

"What kind of a tab did you tell the detectives that was?"

"I told them it was white single-ruled paper."

"What else?"

"I don't remember."

"Jom, you've got a poor memory haven't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"You don't remember well?"

"No, sir."

"Did you tell them anything else?"

"Yes, but I don't remember what it was."

"Is that all you remember?"

"Yes, but if you'll call out something I'll try to tell you whether I said it or not."

"Didn't you tell them what you put in the notes?"

"Yes, sir. I told them: I wrote 'Mother, that that long tall black negro did this.'"

"You said this morning you didn't remember what was in the notes."

"I didn't remember it then."

"Yet, you wrote them?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you know you wrote them?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was it you told them about those notes?"

"I told them I wrote, 'Mother, that long tall black negro did this by his self.'"

"And you said this morning you didn't remember what was in the notes."

"Yes, but I remember now what I put them."

"How did your memory happen to get so good all of a sudden?"

"Because you've been calling it out to me."

"I didn't call it out to you at all. Why didn't you tell the solicitor this morning what you wrote in those notes?"

"I didn't remember."

"Well, is that all you wrote in the notes?"

"I put some more, but I don't remember what it was. I know I put that on there."

Mr. Rosser continued questioning Conley about statements to the detectives, and the negro's memory continued poor.

So, that second statement you told nothing about totting the little girl, did you?"

"Yes, sir," said the negro, "I think I told something about that."

Then, Jim, everything you've said is just as true as that statement that told the second statement about totting the little girl?"

Solicitor Dorsey interrupted. He declared that the statements themselves were the best evidence, that they were in court because counsel for the defense had asked for them in open court, and that they should not be produced.

"But Mr. Dorsey that's the same argument that I ruled on a while ago," said Judge Roan.

DORSEY PROTESTS.

"Your Honor, he is interrogating this witness about those very same statements that he has made us produce in court. The dates are the same, your honor. Why your honor, should all rules of evidence be set aside with reference to this man? How can you shut your eyes to the fact that these papers are here, and that he is asking about these papers?"

"I ruled before," said Judge Roan, 'that they can use these affidavits in order to impeach the witness, and then they must follow the course that you outlined. But they deny that they are using these affidavits."

"Well, doesn't this court know what's going on?" asked Solicitor Dorsey.

"They have the right to ask what he told Black and what was embodied afterward in the form of an affidacit," said Judge Roan.

"I contend they have not," said the solicitor.

JUDGE RULES WITH DEFENSE.

"I rule that they have," said Judge Roan.

Mr. Dorsey started to read an authority, but looked at the judge angrily and sat down.

The solicitor remarked to Attorney Hooper as he sat down that the judge was talking with a visitor and not heeding him.

Judge Roan explained his ruling. "Before an effort is made to impeach a witness," he said, "where there is variance to affidavits or any statements in writing must be followed. But I hold that the defense can ask questions about stat ements which he made to the detectives, which may or may not later have been put into the form of affidavits."

Mr. Rosser continued.

"Jim, don't you know you didn't say a word about that little dead girl at that time?"

"I didn't say I did say anything about her. I said I thought I did."

"Did you tell anything about going down into the basement with the little girl that time?"

"I don't remember."

"What did you mean by saying you were going to keep back part of it?"

"I said I was going to keep back the best of it."

Judge Roan turned to the sheriff a moment later, and said, "Mr. Sheriff, I wish you'd take the jury out." The jury went out.

Attorney Arnold addressed the court.

ASKS SOLITUDE FOR CONLEY.

"Your honor, we want to move that the court take charge of this negro man and order the sheriff to take him and let no one talk to him. Your honor sees that the examination in chief is only half over. We object to him being turned over to the prosecution. We ask your honor to do the fair and square thing. Don't let even the sheriff talk with him until he gets back on the stand. He is now in the custody of the court."

Attorney Hooper, after a consultaton with Solicitor Dorsey, made this statement:

"So far as the state is concerned, we have no objection to the request of Mr. Arnold. We see no harm from the point, however, and that is that this witness is not to be talked to by anyone."

Judge Roan addressed the sheriff.

"Mr. Sheriff, this man's examination is not over. It is not fair for him to be talked to by anyone—not even yourself."

Attorney W. M. Smith, counsel for Conley, who had moved to one of the vacant rooms in the jury box, then jury, arose and addressed the court.

"Your honor, I represent this man. My efforts have been directed toward protecting the liberfests of this negro. I have confidence in the court-room with him and from the courtroom back to his cell with him. I have full confidence in Brother Mangum, but I know the conditions at the jail, and unless one more is appointed to guard him I fear it will be impossible to keep him away from being shot at. This man, as your honor knows, has gone through a most severe ordeal."

Attorney Arnold objected to the last remark of Attorney Smith, declaring that Mr. Smith had nothing to do with this trial.

Sheriff Mangum spoke up.

"I will see that he has as good fare as is served to any white man in the jail."

Attorneyq Smith: "Isn't it true that Mr. Frank has additional food served to him."

"You send him something extra, if you want him to have it" shouted Mr. Smith.

"That's what I want to do," replied Mr. Smith.

Judge Roan then ordered the sheriff to take the witness, guard him carefully, and see that he is back in court at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Mangum walked out with Frank and Deputy Sheriff Penny Minor with Conley.

Frank was taken to jail in the sheriff's automobile, and Conley followed in Chief Beavers' automobile.

"I ain't going to worry," the negro was heard to say as he was being led out of the building, evidently in response to some assurance spoken to him.

Court adjourned at 5:40 o'clock.

Mrs. Gibboney—Game Warden

Mrs. Norma F. Gibboney, of Alma, Ala., is the only woman game warden in the United States. Living near Mobile bay, she has always been fond of outdoor life and is expert in the use of the rifle and shotgun. Her friends were not surprised when Governor O'Neal appointed her a state game warden, which gives her authority to make arrests. Speaking of her new place, she said:

"While I am not fond of publicity about most of my affairs, I am not averse to having it known that I am deeply in earnest about protecting the birds. I have been shocked to find how rapidly the birds are disappearing right here in our own neighborhood.

"I wanted to do something to stop the wanton slaughter and, if possible, give them an opportunity to come back to their old haunts. An ardent sportsman, a friend of mine, suggested that I could do this most effectively by being appointed a game warden.

"Having ample leisure and a good saddle horse, I decided that I would do what I could if appointed to stop the pothunters and the game hogs from slaughtering our birds. I have made two arrests already and am ready to make more if it is necessary.—New York Times.

Gayeties at Wrightsville

The season at Wrightsville Beach is now at its height and the hotels and boarding houses are crowded with guests who are seemingly finding more real enjoyment in their stay at the popular resort than ever before, if such a thing is possible. The weather in the interior at this season of the year is always such as to cause the thoughts of the people to turn beachward and all those who can conveniently do so come down to the ocean for a few days at least.

Bathing, boathing, fishing, dancing, with card parties at the hotels and cottages, go to make up the daily programs, while a number of special features have been provided this year among those being fireworks, very elaborate and expensive, given every week, and the singing of Mrs. Frank Pearson, a noted soloist of Atlanta, who after completing an engagement at Lumina is now filling an engagement for the remainder of the summer at the Seashore hotel, where she is heard every evening by hundreds of guests. This is in addition to the splendid hotel orchestra. Besides, every evening an impromptu concert is given in the lobby by prominent musicians who are guests of the hotel. These impromptu affairs prove decidedly popular, and enjoyable as there are among the guests a number of musicians of great talent and training, both instrumental and vocal.

Among the recent arrivals at the Seashore hotel from Atlanta are Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Spier, Atlanta; Mrs. E. M. Arnold, J. S. Arnold, Jr., Miss Taylor, Mrs. E. C. Thrash, Mrs. S. B. Hanes, Miss Lida Roberts, Mrs. Joseph H. Hanes and children, Mrs. Robert Campbell, Mrs. N. S. Coleman, Miss Lillian Jocelyn, B. L. Spearman, C. W. Dunn, F. W. Hunt, Miss Bonnie Bell Hunt, C. C. Among the other Georgians stopping at the Seashore hotel are Miss Mabel Ramsey, Miss L. D. Ramsey, Torcon; Miss Sara Garland, Mrs. H. J. Garland, Griffin; Mr. and Mrs. S. L. What Anne Rittenhouse Says

Women would like to know whether or not the short separate coats will be worn as part of a suit in next winter. This is a difficult question to answer because no one knows about the coming styles at the present passive moment.

Everything is in chaos: dressmakers suggesting, buyers conjecturing, and the women playing a waiting game. After all, they hold the trumps. They accept or decline whatever fashions they wish, although there are those who would have us believe that women are driven hither and thither by the shops and the dressmakers.

There are some women of whom this is true, but even they soon find their balance by watching other women. They do not always take the word of the shop that such and such a fashion is suitable for them, merely because it is the last thing of the moment. They often buy unwisely, but they continue to wear what they wish and discard what they do not like. On the heads of the women themselves should be put the blame for most of the eccentric and ugly clothes that one sees in public places.

It is often not even the fault of the gown itself—this eccentricity, but the figure which wears it and the way in which it is exploited on the wrong occasion.

Long Coats Again.

France seems determined to bring in the long coat, although its efforts failed last autumn. Judging by the well known way of clothes, a year later than the beginning of the fashion is always the time for it to take hold. Maybe we will have long coats on the women as well as in the designers' salons.

The small figure which has come about among women today is responsible for the vogue of the short coat. Large women look better in the long cutaway coats, yet the designers are trying to take the latter style out of the market. It has been overdone and yet it remains a line of beauty. The newest expression of it is the square postillion coat. It had a long run this summer and it may not last well into the autumn.

Many women will welcome a coat with a straight line in front, because it makes the hips look narrower. Cutaway coats showed a very broad line in front on women who were built that way.

Whatever the shape of the new coat it is probable that the coat of a separate color will be worn. There are many who will say that the idea has been overdone this summer and it is not probable that women will wish to renew it next winter, but the smart women will probably do that very thing. There is small chance that a red coat will be worn with a black skirt, but a plaid coat in dark colors with a skirt in a solid dark color has not lost its effectiveness.

Waistcoats to Help Out.

Here is a point for the woman whose last spring coat was too small; add a waistcoat. There is no falling off in the fashion for this little garment and it serves many needs. It makes the thin suit do in cold weather, and a narrow coat take on breadth. It is fashionable and of infinite variety.

There is no reason against wearing a man's waistcoat, yet women have many of their own made of brocade, of flowered velvet, of striped satin, of heavily ribbed corduroys, and even of thick German wool.

These waistcoats are single breasted with a colored binding and metal or paste pearl buttons. They fasten somewhat higher than usual, and exceedingly dressy ones are made after the Louis XVth model which closes to the collar bone and extends well below the waist.

LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

THORNTON W. BURGESS.

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

Peter Rabbit made a wry face as he listened to Sammy Jay shrieking at the top of his voice as he flew through the Green Forest and over the Green Meadows, "Peter Rabbit's a married! Peter Rabbit's married!" He saw the Merry Little Breezes who, you know, are the children of Old Mother West Wind, start for the dear old briar patch as soon as they heard Sammy Jay, and he knew that they would be only the first of a lot of visitors. He hurried to where Mrs. Peter, who had been little Miss Fuzzytail, was hiding under a sweetbriar rose.

"Do you hear what that mischief maker Sammy Jay, is screaming?" asked Peter.

Mrs. Peetr nodded. "Don't—don't you think it sounds kind of—well, kind of nice, Peter?" she asked in a bashful sort of way.

Peter chuckled. "It sounds more than kind of nice to me," said he. "Do you know, I used to think that Sammy Jay never did and never could say anything nice, but I've just changed my mind. Though he isn't saying it to be nice, it really is the nicest thing I've ever heard him say. We haven't been able to keep our secret, so I think the very best thing we can do is to invite everybody to call. Then we can get it over with and have a little time to ourselves. Here come the Merry Little Breezes, and I know that they will be glad to take the invitations for us."

Mrs. Peter agreed, for she thought that anything Peter did or suggested was just about right. So the Merry Little Breezes were soon skipping and dancing over the Green Meadows and through the Green Forest with this message:

"Md. and Mrs. Peter Rabbit will be at home in the old briar patch to their friends tomorrow afternoon at shadow-time."

"Why did you make it at shadow time?" asked Mrs. Peter.

"Because that will give all our friends a chance to come," replied Peter. "Those who sleep through the day will have waked up, and those who sleep through the night will not have gone to bed. Besides, it will be safer for some of the smallest of them if there are black shadows for them to hide in on their way here."

"How thoughtful you are," said little Mrs. Peter with a little sigh of happiness.

Of course, every one who could walk, creep, or fly, headed for the old briar patch the next day at shadow-time, for almost every one knows and loves Peter Rabbit and, of course, was very anxious to meet Mrs. Peter. From the smiling Pool came Billy Mink, Little Joe Otter, Jerry Muskrat, Spotty the Turtle, and old Grandfather Frog. From the Green Forest came Bobby Coon, Uncle Billy Possum, and Mrs. Possum. Prickly Porky the Porcupine, Whitefoot the Woodmouse, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, Blacky the Crow, Sammy Jay, Ol Mistah Buzzard, Mistah Mockingbird, and Stickytoes the Treetoad. From theGreeen Madows came Danny Meadow Mouse, Old Mr. Toad, Digger the Badger, Jimmy Skunk, and Striped Chipmunk, who lives near the old stone wall between the edge of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest. Johnny and Polly Chuck came down from the old orchard, and Drummer the Woodpecker came from the same place.

Of course Old Man Coyote paid his respects, and when he came everybody but Pricky Porky and Digger the Badger and Jimmy Shrunk made way for him with great respect. Granny and Reddy Fox and Hooty the Owl didn't call, but they sat where they could look on and made fun. You see, Peter had fooled all three so many times that they felt none too friendly.

Very proud looked Peter as he stood under a bramble bush with Mrs. Peter by his side and introduced her to his many friends, and very sweet and modest and retiring looked little Mrs. Peter as she sat beside him. Everybody said that she was "too sweet for anything," and when Reddy Fox overheard that remark he grinned and said:

"Not for me! She can't be too sweet for me, and I hope I'll have a chance to find out just how sweet she is."

What do you suppose he meant?

ISSUED IN THE INTEREST OF THE SOUTHERN MERCHANTS CONVENTION

CONVENTION SWINGS INTO SESSION WITH SYMPOSIUM ON CROPS

Speakers Tell How Greater Diversity of Farming Will Help Business Interests in Southern States

BIG CROWD ATTENDS THE OPENING SESSION

Discussion Presents the Subject From the Viewpoint of the Merchant, Packer, Miller and Banker

With the calling of the meeting to order by President Bolling H. Jones, the invocation by Bishop W. A. Candler, and the addresses of welcome by Governor Slaton and Mayor Woodward, the opening session of the great two weeks' convention of southern merchants was launched at Taft hall Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

A big crowd filled the room at the opening hour and was constantly augmented by incoming delegates as they arrived from all parts of the south. They came with the spirit of pleasurable anticipation and with that air of prosperity which the present crop and trade conditions so fully warrant.

When the preliminaries were over, the convention settled at once to the discussion of the vital topics scheduled on the program. J. W. Vaughan, a leading merchant of Cartersville, pleaded the cause of greater diversity of crops in the south, urging all merchants, landlords and bankers to use all their influence toward having more hay, grain, hogs and cattle raised at home. J. R. Bachman, of the Atlanta Milling company, continued the subject from the viewpoint of the miller and showed how farmers could best market their overplus of grain.

W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision company, of Atlanta, showed how essential it was to the welfare of the south that more cattle and hogs be raised as a by-product of the farm, and Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National bank, demonstrated the greater stability of credit that would come from a wider variety of production by southern farmers.

The open parliament following developed in five minutes' speeches from many of the delegates the essential need of greater crop diversity and many helpful ideas of how it could be brought about were advanced.

In his speech of welcome to the delegates Governor Slaton welcomed them as the "aptimists of the state and yet the business men who show by their daily life and business methods the virtues of economy.

"You are the men," said the governor, "who have a leading responsibility in developing the factors shown on the great seal of the state of Georgia as the basis of our prosperity and which have stood the test of time as such since the seal was adopted over one hundred years ago."

Mayor Woodward sketched the growth of Atlanta to the present day and welcomed the merchants to the city as the greatest mart of commerce in the state.

"Observe while you are here," said the mayor, "what has caused Atlanta's great growth. In my opinion, it is particularly the great diversity of its manufacturing, coupled with the facilities here for distribution of merchandise from all th ecountry."

R. O. Crouch, of Griffin, in replying to the addresses of welcome, sounded a note of optimism on business prospects that impressed every one.

"We have come to Atlanta," said Mr. Crouch, "for a good time and to get ideas on our problems in merchandising with the pleasing knowledge that crops are fine and a good fall business is ahead of us.

"We merchants must recognize that next to building our individual business interests it is our first duty to build up the business of the state, and this we can do by patronizing our home markets.

"In coming here to the convention some consider that the invitation has a string tied to it in that we should buy goods while here, but we must regard it as always our plain duty to buy in our home markets wherever other things are equal."

J. W. Vaughan, of Cartersville, Ga., was the next speaker and opened the discussion on the main subject of the morning with a speech that furnished much food for thought to the merchants.

He was followed by Yancey Hill in an able discussion of this subject which was given force by some of his personal experiences with th eproblems the question involved.

J. R. Bachman, of the Atlanta Milling company, told the merchants they must encourage more growing of grain by the farmers of their section.

"You should not only suggest, but should require of the farmers through whom principally comes your support that they each devote a part of their land to th ecultivation of grain. To illustrate the dearth of home-grown grain I will say that our mill did not use one bushel of home-grown grain last year. Our state should look forward to supplying grain to other markets as well as ourselves."

W. H White, Jr., spoke on the subject of cattle and hogs as a by-product and brought out some interesting points on this feature.

He was followed by J. A. McCord, of Atlanta, who spoke on the greater stability of credit resulting from these movements.

The rest of the session was devoted to an open discussion of the subjects of the morning.

The remainder of the two weeks [illegible] as busy as we've been the first [illegible]" says W. C. Barnwell, at the Malone company, "we will be greatly pleased with the volume of trade. General business conditions haven't been so good for some time and it is reflected in the way the merchants are buying.

FLORIDA MERCHANT, FIRST TO REGISTER, SETS UNDER WAY THE BIG CELEBRATION

merchant, of Havana, Fla., with waving flag and resounding hurrahs, is shown opening the festivities of the two weeks' meeting of the Southern Merchants' convention. He typifies the spirit with which the merchants of the south are arriving in Atlanta for the big occasion.

WARD-TRUITT CO. TO DISCONTINUE BUSINESS

Are Conducting Big Closing Out Sale—All Salesmen in for the Event

The big dry goods firm of Ward-Truitt company, known all over the south, is going out of busines. Announcement of their intention to discontinue was made to the trade last week. On account of the discontinuance, the firm is conducting a closing out sale, which began Monday, and is offering unusual attractions to the visiting merchants. Already they have sold a number of fine orders. All the company's salesmen are here to attend to the wants of customers. They are D. P. McDaniel, Louis Parker, Luther Parker, C. V. Nally, R. G. Garrard, L. G. Woodall, E. K. Culpepper and Paul Cooper.

VISITOR HAS EXCITING EXPERIENCE ON ARRIVAL

W. H. Wilson, a young merchant from Bainbridge, Ga., here to attend the merchants' gathering, had hardly reached the city yesterday when he had an experience not promised by the convention's program.

In a crowd a negro snatched at the Bainbridge man's watch and nearly succeeded in getting it. Mr. Wilson detected him in time and suffered no worse loss than a broken watch chain. The negro got away but not before his wouldbe victim landed on him once with his fist.

Visiting merchants with a big roll will do well to keep their hand on it, except, of course, when they visit the wholesale houses where they are expected to spend it at once.

SO. GEORGIA MERCHANTS PREFER ATLANTA MARKET

Arrives in Atlanta Sunday and Is at Convention Headquarters Next Morning, the Earliest of the Early

The early bird of the 1913 convention of southern merchants was here early on opening day. In fact none other was earlier than he. The fact that his home is a good long reach from Atlanta did not prevent him from being first on the spot prepared to participate in all the convention doings and enjoy them to the fullest extent.

The visitor entitled to the distinction of being the first arrival is W. S. Loyd, merchant of Havana, Fla. He came to Atlanta Sunday night and was at Secretary H. T. Moore's office next morning just as latter got down the book for the registry of visitors and spread it upon the table, and like Abon Ben Adhem, Mr. Loyd's name led all the rest.

After he had registered it was not long before he had paid a round of visits to his friends among the jobbers and was away to view the city to see how much it had grown since his last visit.

Mr. Loyd is one of the foremost merchants not only of his city, but also of his state and his success is due in no small measure to this characteristic of his of being first to recognize a good opportunity and take advantage of it.

He has been buying his goods in Atlanta for several years, and expresses himself as highly delighted with the wholesale market here.

"I came early for a reason," said he. "I look for the present gathering of merchants to be one of the greatest that your city has ever held. I have been reading about the good things that the program offers; I came in time to enjoy them all. I expect to be here throughout the week."

HANES BROS. OPEN SPECIAL SAMPLE ROOMS

At 603 Kimball house J. Carlton Hanes and Sam Hanes, of the Ragan-Malone company sales staff, have fitted out a sample room.

The special sample room is for the purpose of having a place where the merchants from their territories who are ready to buy their stock for the season may meet them and transact business at any hour that suits them. The brothers expect to do a good business there in the evenings.

RETAIL CREDITS, MOST IMPORTANT SUBJECT

Columbus Merchant Is Delighted With Subjects for Discussion on Program

"The greatest problem of the retail merchant is in the extending of credit. Let the convention discuss that question and its details fully. There is nothing that needs its attention more," says C. R. Williams, who arrived yesterday from Columbus, Ga., for the convention.

"It is a good program that has been arranged," continued Mr. Williams. "The problems to be discussed are ones to be hammered at continually. If we meet here and discuss these same questions for the next five years it will be time well spent.

Mr. Williams is of the firm of Williams, Erwin & Reese, of Columbus. He says crop conditions in his section are much better than a month ago, that the merchants are optimistic for fall business, and that a large delegation from Columbus and vicinity will be here.

TRAVELER INTERRUPTS TRIP TO BOOST ATLANTA

Gets Off Train at Washington, Returning With Man Contemplating Investing Here

Editor Firing Line: Taking it for granted that it will be of interest to you, I will endeavor to relate in as few words as possible a conversation which took place between two gentlemen in the New Willard hotel during dinner this evening.

We sat at the same table, but as they were perfect strangers to me, I did not butt in until I deemed it entirely in order.

One was traveling from Lynchburg, and the other from New York.

They were expressing their opinions of the different hotels, towns, cities and merchants throughout the United States. The gentleman from Lynchburg made the remark that in his opinion Atlanta was the greatest town in the world in every respect.

He said that the town was a solid body of boosters, and everywhere you could find a bunch of fellows pulling for Atlanta.

He also mentioned a conversation which took place in the smoker on one of the through trains going east a few days since.

A number of gentlemen were in the smoker, and one in the party said he had been south to invest his money, but was returning home, very much discouraged as the towns that he had been to did not interest him in the least.

A gentleman from Atlanta and one also from Memphis asked him if he had been to their home towns, and he replied that he had not.

Atlanta and Memphis locked horns, and after discussing the advantages of the two towns they reached the conclusion that Memphis had nothing but the Mississippi river and a plenty of booze.

The Atlanta man told the capitalist that he was on his way to New York, but if he really meant business and wanted to invest his money in a town that would make him millions, he would go back with him. They got off at Washington and bought a ticket for Atlanta.

I presume ere this they have arrived and will soon own the town. The gentleman from New York said that he traveled the entire south and he considered Atlanta in a class to itself He also complimented you and The Journal very highly.

As I could endure it no longer I introduced myself, and we spent the balance of the evening very pleasantly together.

If nothing prevents I will be home in about ten days.

A friend of mine here has a beautiful yacht, and he has invited me to join a party of friends for a few days' cruise up the Potomac.

Wishing you, and all, much success, I am.

Sincerely,

W. M. DARDEN.

WADE SWAPS ST. LOUIS FOR ATLANTA FIRM

Says Atlanta Shoe Maker Has Big Hold on Georgia Merchants

Delegates to the convention from south Georgia will be interested in the announcement that L. C. Wade signed a contract Saturday with the M. C. Kiser company to cover that territory for them.

As a representative of a St. Louis wholesale shoe company he is well known in Georgia, having been on the road in the lower end of the state for the last five years.

It is because Mr. Wade sees the value of being an Atlanta booster that he made the change.

"Atlanta shoe houses are getting the business now in Georgia," says Mr. Wade. "It is becoming harder all the time for other markets to compete. I know from experience and I'm mighty glad to be lined up with Atlanta now."

Mr. Wade will be glad to see his merchant friends at his new company's headquarters on East Hunter street.

BUSIEST OPENING DAY OF ANY MERCHANTS' WEEK

Active Trading Predicted in Connection With Convention by Start Made Monday

Most promising starting day of any merchants' week yet—this was the unanimous opinion among the Atlanta wholesale houses at the close of the business day yesterday, comparing with previous years.

Though today is the first day of the actual convention and the retail merchants were not expected to arrive in really large numbers until last night and this morning, Monday was a very busy day at most of the jobbing houses looking after the buyers who were in throughout the day.

Many wholesalers who did not expect the buying of goods, which the visiting delegates make one of the objects of their trip here, to get well under way until the last of this week were surprised to find themselves working overtime to take care of the trade Monday. This morning the shipping bins were filled and the aisles clogged with trucks of goods sold yesterday.

Merchants arriving yesterday morning took advantage of the open day to do their buying so that they might be entirely free to devote the rest of their time to the convention itself.

With the start that was made Monday the wholesale houses will be buzzing with activity Wednesday when there will be no session at the auditorium and the whole day given over to visiting the factories and jobbing houses.

REGISTRATION OPENED TUESDAY AT 6 O'CLOCK

At 6 o'clock this morning, R. L. Lawrance and H. W. Gates, registrars of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, were on the job of taking care of th evisitors.

A man stationed at each of the newspaper stations with a huge "information bureau" sign met the delegates, gave them copies of the convention program and a list of hotels and directed them to the auditorium to register.

At the auditorium the registrars were ready at seven o'clock and the crowd began coming before eight o'clock. By nine o'clock several hundred had registered with the number increasing fast.

The assisting the two mentioned in receiving the delegates at the auditorium are Bernard Hunter, R. A. Monticth, H. J. Baker and W. L. Percy.

MANAGER TELLS HOW SHOE STYLES ARE MADE

Are Product of Care and Study – Results Compared at Style Conference

After the merchants' convention E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, will leave for Cincinnati to attend one of the regular "style making meetings" of the company's eight branch managers.

Some insight into the exhaustive study and planning which lies back of the changes in shoe styles is to be had from an account by Mr. Thomas of the proceedings at these meetings.

Just who pulls the strings and how in the setting of fashions in any class of wearing apparel is a common mystery with the general public and not al lshoe dealers realize the care with which the slightest changes in such things as toe tip or heel height are considered.

In a general explanation of the procedure Mr. Thomas says:

"Each big shoe manufacturing concern has its own style making system. Sometimes a style brought out by one company will meet with such widespread popularity that it is copied generally throughout the shoe industry, but in designing the shoes the companies work separately.

"Our company make styles twice a year. Following each semi-annual meeting of managers for that purpose they meet again three months later to pass finally on the designs.

"t all these meetings we are around able in earnest discussion for ten or two weeks. For months previous every manager has been sending to the head office a mass ofn otes and suggestions which he has gathered from his salesmen, his customers, retail store clerks and some original with himself.

"All through the year the branch manager keeps an alert lookout for these tips—especially does he keep carefully in touch with his salesmen for suggestions. They in turn get pointers from the retail trade and the retailers' suggestions to the traveling men are the result usually of remarks from their own customers, the public.

"With this boiled down information, from thousands of sources before them, the managers get together—usually at headquarters at Boston. They have also hand also data supplied by what is known as the "Style Service"—an organization which sells to the manufacturers original designs and suggestions on details. It is then the two weeks' task of the managers to further sift all this data.

"Many things are thrown out at once by general consent. Suggestions that get a favorable vote are given workmen at once for models to be made. When these are brought in they are sometimes accepted and some times discarded. In the meantime the discussion of every feature to the smallest details goes on, tips, toes, perforations, seams, sole extensions, etc.

"After the meeting is ended the approved styles are not used for three months. Then there is the meeting which is for the sole purpose of final approval. A sample of each of the several hundred patterns is before us. Some times at these second meetings a pattern all agreed on three months previously is unanimously thrown out with little discussion. Many small changes are made. You have no idea how they are pulled to pieces. These second meetings last nearly as long as the first. When they are done we are ready to stand for our styles as corrected.

"Some companies get their sales force together instead of only the managers. The latter plan, however, embraces the salesmen's ideas without the disadvantage of the cumbersome gathering of a large number of men.

"Styles are not nearly so jealously guarded from each other by the different concerns now as in former years. It is so all through the shoe trade. I remember many years ago it was common for shoe houses to always have a man hurry out to the sidewalk the instant a case of shoes was landed from the dray and paint out the manufacturers name for fear some competitor would learn it. The idea was to guard against a rival getting some style that proved popular. Now most jobbers publish their manufacturer's name.

"Our style meeting this month will be to approve the designs for next spring. The designs are made one year ahead. In May and November.

"This year has been a well balanced one in the shoe trade—there has been less of the craz for particular styles, except that rubber soled oxfords have had a big run."

BUSY TIME WITH CONVENTION REGISTRAR

CONVENTION ECHOES

Doings and Sayings of the Great Gathering

J. D. Robinson, president, himself fired the first gun at the A. M. Robinson company yesterday by a big sale to a visiting merchant. It was almost a sunrise salute as he met his customer at 7 o'clock and immediately got down to business.

C. S. Shiflett, city salesman, is the regular "man at the auditorium" for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, and was right on the job early Monday.

Even ahead of the company's Florida salesman was there to greet them, two merchants from that state visited the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company yesterday to buy season's bills.

"I am going to double that figure on house sales this week," says Chris Irby, the A. M. Robinson company traveler, who sold $4,500 on the road last week.

Merchants buying early and late is no idle expression in speaking of the business at John Silvey & Co. They had several engagements with customers for this morning at 7 o'clock.

To add to the general activity at the Ragan-Malone company, six to eight clerks are working overtime mailing out a mass of advertising matter to the trade.

W. S. Gaston, city salesman for Fain & Stamps, is feeling a bit chesty over the fact that he led the entire sales force for July. This is the second month in succession that he has made this record.

"You just can't keep them away from this convention," says R. L. Smith, south Georgia traveler for A. M. Robinson company. "A customer of mine for whom I made hotel reservations wrote me Saturday circumstances had arisen preventing his coming. Now he wires me, 'I'll be there, leaving today.'"

Two opening bills last week is why C. S. Shiflett, city mon for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, was smiling so broadly yesterday. This puts him about even with W. J. Hays, of this company, who has been nabbing a good number of opening bills in Atlanta and vicinity this year. Who's next?

After about six weeks out, R. L. Smith is in from the road, at the A. M. Robinson company.

W. T. Culpepper, bookkeeper for Fain & Stamps, leaves this week for his vacation at Borden Springs, Ala.

N. K. Smith, the Battle Axe shoe man in Atlanta territory, says he expects a good trade during merchants' convention, and that over 2,000 invitations have been sent out. Mr. Smith has been making semi-annual displays in Atlanta for over ten years, and has a large crop of late buyers who visit his sample rooms each season in August and February.

J. C. Mason, of the Consolidated Paper company, will spend the week here attending the merchants' convention.

Harry J. Sternberg is the Atlanta representative of Fielding-Behrand Stationery company, of New York. He is in charge of his company's display of holiday and fancy goods at No. 2 Peachtree street. He has mailed out several thousand circulars to the southern merchants to visit his display.

TIP TOP SALESMAN HERE FOR CONVENTION

Bartow Morgan, Jr., the man who gave the tip to the out-of-town merchants on the value of selling Tip Top Broad, will be in attendance on the merchants' convention throughout the two weeks. He expects to greet all his old friends and make many new ones.

SILVEY CO. SHOWS VISITORS ALFALFA PATCH

To Demonstrate How to Diversify Business of Merchandising With Farming

"Where the alfalfa grows."

This line next to the firm name in the John Silvey & Co. advertisements caused much speculative comment yesterday among other jobbing houses and visiting merchants are puzzled when they reach the John Silvey place on Marietta street by a large freshly plowed plot next to the building over which there is the sign—"Alfalfa being planted here by Loring Brown, to feed Buster and Kate."

H. L. Solomonson, the company's cashier, has the back to the farm bee buzzing in his bonnet. Particularly is he turning his interest to alfalfa. He has studied up on alfalfa until he talks it to everyone around the building that will listen, morning, noon and night. Mr. Solomonson is convinced that Georgia farmers should go in for alfalfa and some of his enthusiasm has been caught by others of the company.

This is why there is going to soon be a plot of green, waving alfalfa within two blocks of the heart of Atlanta's business district. The Silvey people say they have two reasons for thus utilizing the little vacant lot next their building—grow feed for their two dray mules and more especially to give visiting merchants a bit of actual demonstration of the possibilities of alfalfa that they may encourage the farmers back home to try growing it.

N. U. Gunter, of the Ragan-Malone house force, sold the first merchant who vihited there yesterday a $2,000 bill of goods.

Maret in New Yor Closed 4 to 13 Points Down From the Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Continued selling caused further decline in cotton today. Liverpool met the declines which had occurred in American markets since the close there Friday and reports of slow trade in Manchester probably contributed to weakness here. While southern selling was accompanied by favorable crop reports from the eastern belt, the market opened steady at an advance of 2 to a decline of 1 point. Active months sold 3 to 5 points net lower during the early trading—August remained steadily steady, declining a point or two after the closing figures of which said there was enough trade buying to check the decline below 11c for December and 11.50c for March, the latter being reported in the southwest.

Trading became less active later and the market was barely steady at middday with prices 4 to 6 lower. Estimated receipts today 45,000 bales.

The weekly report of the weather bureau indicating that Texas and Oklahoma will need rain, caused some covering during the afternoon and prices rallied 5 to 9 points from the early prices, the session's closing figures. There was no general demand however.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 5.—Cotton futures opened steady at a decline of 4 to 6 points on poor cables and weather reports rather true in the beginning in spite of the clear weather over the belt and the promise of more dry weather for today. Telegrams from Texas complained of heat and drouth, but they stimulated little trading. Later on there was some buying on a steady tone. At the end of the first half hour of business prices were 5 to 10 points net lower for the active positions of yesterday.

The market was dull around the middle of the morning with prices showing no decided tendency. At 11 o'clock the weekly weather reports continued rather unfavorable and the estimation of drouthy conditions over a large part of the cotton region and they claim that growth of the crop is suffering a serious state of affairs in Oklahoma and portions of Texas. Trading for both accounts spread and the market quickly rose 6 to 8 points on the new crop months. Bulls made no attempt to press their advantage and at noon the market was quiet again with prices 2 points under the close of yesterday. At noon the tone was steady.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—In the cotton belt from Louisiana and Arkansas eastward, the weather has been favorable during most of the week. Temperatures were near the normal and frequent showers afforded sufficient moisture over the greater portion of the belt. In Oklahoma there was practically no rain, and vegetation is suffering for moisture. The situation damage is threatened in man sporadic cases in Texas. Generally speaking there was much of the state, but the amounts were insufficient and severe drouth still persists in portions of the northern belt.

The early selling was rather general, with no special support in evidence. Offerings were small, and the market eased off under the pressure.

The weather report which was moderately bullish brought out some buying, and a slight rally followed, but the market finds itself facing sales on all hard spots, as sentiment continues bearish and the near future is expected unless there are serious changes in crop conditions.

It is believed, however, that the spot interest is buying freely on the recent declines. They bought freely yesterday and one or two of them bought on the early decline today. There has also been some scattered short covering. Wall street and the uptown crowd have been among the leading sellers, and the latter has been a seller on this market lately.

WASHINGTON WEATHER REPORT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Mean temperatures ranged 1 to 5 degrees above normal except slightly below normal in the extreme southeastern Alabama, northwestern Louisiana and the Gulf coast region, and Florida. In Texas it was a slight deficiency. Weekly mean temperatures ranged 72 to 82 over eastern, 80 to 82 central, and 82 to 86 western districts.

The market was moderately active, with prices showing no decided tendency. At 11 o'clock the weekly weather reports continued rather unfavorable and the estimation of drouthy conditions over a large part of the cotton region and their claim that growth of the crop is suffering a serious state of affairs in Oklahoma and portions of Texas. INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

Thies Dalgorf says: More rain in the west and less in the east gave the bear something definite to talk about and the cotton market reflected the presence of a larger volume of selling orders than buying orders. As a matter of fact, the market is far too dull to start anything in the way of definite price drift, light. Around the edges there is little "no" buying power. In most sections the crop outlook is to be more optimistic as to Texas. Everybody knows that where good rains have fallen the cotton is now in excellent shape, but the rings are not agreed as to the extent of the Texas cotton lands receiving adequate moisture. Meanwhile fair dry weather throughout the belt is promised by the government.

Map shows part cloudy south Texas and Atlantic coast; clear elsewhere. Temperatures 8 a. m. Sunday: Abilene, 72; Amarillo, 70; Corpus Christi, 78; Dallas, 72; Fort Worth, 72; Galveston, 80; Houston, 76; Palestine, 72; Port Arthur, 80; Sherman, 72; Taylor, 72; Waco, 72; Wichita Falls, 72.

Liverpool writes: It seems absurd to think that the American bill will become a law. We should, it would be a strong bear card, probably, but we do not believe it will become a law. We doubt if sales ahead are not large. They have been in the past two or three years. Will the government relieve it will be the disturbances there have caused orders be withdrawn.

Mike Thomas, Dallas, Tex., wires: Unless we have general soaking rains, the crop will not help the bear any. Plant smallest ever; shedding fearful.

Weekly weather report just published, moderately bullish, bringing out some buying.

None scattered showers covering too small a long but market finds ready sales on any bard spots. Sentiment against market.

Forty Times Around Track at Motordrome Tuesday Evening

Ten Mile Race At Motordrome Tuesday Night

Many Riders Have Secured New Machines and Are Out to Hang Up a Few Marks to Shoot at in Future Meets

The speed god will reign supreme at the big saucer of Jack Prince Tuesday night. All the riders are keyed to the highest pitch and are only waiting to hear the pistol crack for the start. The rain refused to let them have a chance last Friday night, and now that they have had a week's rest from actual racing they are in the best shape possible. For the past week they have been far from idle; when the weather permitted they were out on the boards tuning up the big machines. Every rider says his old boat is going great and will be hard to head Tuesday night.

Now that Morty Graves has took a hand in the winnings it looks like a real three-cornered fight for first place between Graves, Richards and McNeil. Since Morty tore the track up at an 88-mile clip the last time he raced it is a hard matter to pick a winner. The other riders are not to be forgotten. They will give good accounts of themselves.

The feature of Tuesdays 'racing will be the Atlanta Sweepstakes race with a final heat of ten miles. Five men will be in this and the racing is sure to be fast.

Harry Glenn is scheduled to meet Billy Shields in a match race. The atlanta boy has been going good in these match races and is expected to add another scalp to his belt on Tuesday night.

The full card for the night appears below, and it is one of the best yet put out by the 'drome management:

FIRST EVENT.

Motordrome Purse—Three one-mile qualifying heats, final two miles. First

SECOND EVENT.

Second Heat Motordrome Purse—Lockner, Richards, Luther.

THIRD EVENT.

Third Heat Motodrome Purse—Renal, McNeil, Lewis, Glenn.

FOURTH HEAT.

Special match race between Glenn and Shields. Distance, two miles. Best two heats in three.

FIFTH EVENT.

Final of Motordrome Purse, Two Miles—First in each trial heat and second man in fastest trial heat.

SIXTH EVENT.

Special Match Race—Second heat between Glenn and Shields.

SEVENTH EVENT.

Atlanta Sweepstakes—Two one-mile trial heats and ten-mile final. First heat, Graves, Richards, Schwartz, Lewis, Lockner.

EIGHTH EVENT.

Second Heat Atlanta Sweepstakes—Renal, Shields, Glenn, Luther, McNeil.

NINTH EVENT.

Third heat, if necessary, match race between Glenn and Shields.

TENTH EVENT.

Final Heat Atlanta Sweepstakes, Ten Miles—First and second men in each trial heat and third man in fastest trial heat to start.

Pick Poloist In Last Game

On Wednesday Atlanta fans will receive their introduction to polo. The Fort McPherson men have arranged an elaborate setting for the games and the two teams have been practicing well to give the local contingent a good impression of the game at first sight.

As a side issue the soldiers will indulge in horseback scrapping which would in themselves be well worth seeing. These will include wrestling on horseback, and a tug of war. And music by the regiment band and Glee club.

The last practice for the big game will be held on this afternoon, and Wednesday they are off.

No admission will be charged to see the game.

Waycross Gets Away Over Valdosta Club

HUMAN BEAN POLE LOVE BEHAVED LIKE REAL STAR

Control, speed, change of pace and simple curves.

This is the combination "Slim" Love, Atlanta's new southpaw pitcher, possesses and which he exhibited such a repute tion that teams for the distance of twenty miles sent for hi into pitch. Memphis is only thirty miles away from Love. Miss., and Bill Bernhard inhaled breaths of the adulation all north Mississippi was laying at Love's feet, and Bill sent him a letter in the spring of 1912 offering him a trial. "Slim" accepted.

Bill looked him over, so did the Memphis fans who went crazy over the six-feet-seven of hurling timber, but Bill didn't. He farmed the skyscraper to Vicksburg after a few months' trial. Love was discouraged, contracted malaria and it was only after several months rest on his father's farm that he came to himself again.

Then he reentered semi-pro ranks for the rest of 1912, pitching 29 games and losing only 2. This record caused Selma to give him a trial. Manager Harry Smyatt, of Selma, now third baseing for Nashville, declares Love made good with a jump and shows his record to prove it—nineteen games won, two lost; thirty-six innings pitched without being scored on; and an average of less than two men walkee each game.

Now Atlanta has Love on an optional agreement. A certain price, amount unknown, will be paid a provided Love makes good after a thorough trial; if he fails he will be returned to Selma. And made good, while all the baseball man with the Atlanta people he has already agreed on. The question now is whether, who measures 6 feet 3 inches, Love has three brothers, the lowest of whom is 6 feet 1-2 inches.

PAT GRAHAM.

Ex-Cracker, who will doubtless be turned adrift to make room for Mike Giddo, whom Elberfeld has recalled from Troy, New York.

Work Started On Auto Track

The breaking of ground and the hauling of lumber for the new auto track which is to be constructed for Atlanta race fans has already commenced.

This track should be thickly populous with the auto drivers, as they expressed a wish for just such a track, at a meet in St. Louis last year, and Jack Prince conceived the idea of building it. He, with the co-operation of Frank Weldon, Wiley Wood, Mark Nabors, George Hanson, Dan Walraven and Thomas Webb, local automobile men, have leased a piece on Collier road, about 4 1-2 miles out of the city, and the council passed on the project.

It will require 2,000,000 feet of lumber to build the track.

The races will begin some time late in October, and the first race will be 100 miles, the second 200 miles and the third 300 miles.

The auto track should prove a big advertisement for Atlanta, and at the same time furnish thrills for the race fans. It will probably be completed by October 20.

Wahoo Not to Go to Mercer

Charley Wahoo has definitely announced that he will not Coach Mercer. The board of directors of the Mercer Athletic association tendered their proposition to him formally on Monday, but he declined to accept same.

In his own words, "Their proposition was good, but I could not afford to leave my present position."

Just who the Mercer authorities have in view now, is not known, but they are on the lookout for a good man to fill Coach Stroud's shoes, and develop the Mercer teams to their highest efficiency.

Henri St. Yves, the French Marathon runner, has again returned to the motorcycle game and is taking part in eastern competitions.

Price to Face Coveleskiie in Second Battle

Cracker Club Has Gained Confidence by Winning Opener and Are Out to Make Clean Sweep of Series

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 5.—It will be Gilbert Price vs. Ole Coveleskie in the second game between the Lookouts and Crackers. The Crackers have gained added confidence by taking the opening game and are favorites for the second melee despite the fact that the Pole will do the flinging for the home crew.

The Crackers are right now batting with all their might and main to get a good lead on Birmingham and overtake the Dobbers and Gulls in a fight for first place. The infield with Holland on third looked mighty good in the game here Monday, and the youngster seems able to put up a good class of ball. He made a distinct hit with the fans by the manner in which he stood at the platter, crowding the plate at all kind of hurling.

President Frank Callaway, of the Atlanta club, is here for the Tuesday battle and his boys are sure to play good ball in an effort to show him just how good they are. CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

The league leaders in the Southern had an off day on Monday, while Dent got away with a victory for the Crackers. President Ravanaugh has, however, changed the Nashville game which Atlanta has been claiming as won, played over, and so the standing is the same as yesterday, since one game won has been deducted from Atlanta's percentage. This leaves the Crackers still five full games behind the leaders.

Al Demaree again headed the Giants in a successful onslaught on the Pirates. The Phillies also won their game.

In the American, the Athletics pushed the Naps further into second place by defeating them, 7 to 1.

"SLIM" SALLEE, CARDINALS' BIG SOUTHPAW, WOULD BE A WONDER WITH A GOOD TEAM

"SLIM" SALLEE.

Every once in a while "Slim" Sallee, the St. Louis National league club pitcher, performs sensationally and sets tongues wagging.

His latest notable work was the blanking of the Giants, to whom he allowed but three hits. Sallee threatens to become a great left-hander almost every year, but with the hopeless Cardinals behind him never gets farther than the threatening period.

Properly handled, with a fast-fielding, hard-hitting team to support him, Sallee would be one of the greatest pitchers that ever played the game. Under Roger Bresnahan he did great work and has shown flashes of it for Miller Huggins, but it really would require a Connie Mack or a McGraw, with the best of teams they have, to make Sallee a great star.

Instructions Given Twice

Rube Evans Has Repeated All Instructions from Managers

Rube Evans, a minor league left-hander, lives in Dallas, Texas, now with Birmingham, has one curious habit—a trait which has aroused much wonder on the part of every manager under whom the southpaw has been toiling. When given an order by his manager or captain, Evans always stops, cocks his ears and demands a repetition of the directions.

Naturally he is at first taken for a simp or bonehead, but when further acquaintance with him show that he is a gentleman of intelligence and high mentality, the field leaders are much puzzled. Not long ago, when Charley Frank, the New Orleans boss, had Evans demand duplication of a very simple order. Frank, one of the best explainers, and after the game Evans told his story.

"I always want my orders repeated," quoth Evans, "so that I will never again make such an error as marked my first professional game. It was at McKeesport, and my first manager, named Collins, was responsible. In this initial game I was getting along nicely, and the battle had gone along till the ninth, when the enemy got a runner on third, with one down. Collins ran up to me and blased impressively: 'Rube, I've copped their signal for a squeeze play. There's only one way to break that up. Lean the pesser—lean him and don't miss him. No run can score when a guy is beaned, so go to it and don't fail.'

"I knew no more what a squeeze play was than the man in the moon, but my orders rang' in my ears as I started winding up. Just as I swung up my arm the fellow on third tore for the plate. 'Aha,' I cried, 'there's the candidate for beaning!' I took careful aim at the oncoming runner and pickled him with a fine shot on the back of the cranium. Three seconds later the whole crowd was coming toward me with roars of fury and I got over the back fence just in time.

"Well, how was I to know that I should have hit the batter and not the runner? Ever since I have insisted on duplicate orders, so that I would know just what to do—and I don't think you can blame me."

Checker Stars Play for Title

The sixth annual checker tournament for the championship of the south is now in full blast at Carl hall. It started Tuesday morning and will last through Wednesday, possibly longer.

About all of the southern states are represented in this tournament and the players included some of the craftiest men of the game. Checkers is primarily a game of patience and foresight. And these men engaging for the south's title are the epitome of skill along this line. To the novice it is marvelous to see the moves they make and the ultimate results of them.

The present title holder, J. M. Allen, of Knoxville, Tenn., is on hand and will play through the tournament. He has won this coveted honor for two years, 1911 and 1912.

F. B. Fishburn, of South Carolina, who held the championship three successive years prior to 1911, has entered the tournament and his skill will certainly carry him well up toward the title.

Mr. Anderson, of Aberdeen, Scotland, who came over to see this country, is also in the tournament, besides many others. In all they total about thirty.

The public is invited to attend the tournament. One of the features of this tournament will be an exhibition of blindfolded playing given by Mr. Fishburn. He has offered to meet six of the best players attending in this condition.

Philadelphia women swimmers are competing in weekly races on the Schuylkill river. It is the first contests of the kind ever held in the east.

NEWNAN FANS HEAR DETAIL

NEWNAN, Ga., Aug. 5.—The Newnan Baseball association has contracted with the various clubs of the Georgia-Alabama league, for a private telephone line to run to the local headquarters and thereafter the fans of Newnan will hear from the games while in play, each play being sent just as it is made.

This is a new scheme for this league, Newnan being the only club to try it, and it is estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 people will daily listen as the games are played on the road for the next week.

The Gadsden series is being watched with most enthusiasm, as Newnan and Gadsden are the "top-notchers" of this league, and are playing a series of four games. Newnan has secured two new pitchers from the Cotton States league and also a new outfielder and catcher, all having fine recommendations as ball players.

Boxing Bouts At Auditorium

Frank Whitney and Jimmy Perry Coming Wednesday, Week Before Match

Lou Castro has changed his plans, and will stage his first bout at the auditorium instead of St. Nicholas skating rink as was first planned.

This change of place, is, however, the only change which has been made in the plan for the coming bout. Frank Whitney has been heard from and it is stated that he will be here soon to start training. The bout will be pulled Wednesday week (August 12), and the principal bout will be between Charley White and Frank Whitney. The final windup will be between Charley Lee and Kid Young.

The change in the place will be made because of inability to get the skating rink in shape by the time of the bout to accommodate the spectators comfortably.

Tennis Champs In Big Meet

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Championship tennis teams from four sections of the United States will star play today at Onwentsia, to decide which pair shall meet Maurice McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, of San Francisco, for the national doubles title in the challenge round at Newport on August 18.

Pairings for the opening matches pit Heath Byford and R. H. Burdick, western champions, against W. M. Washburne and Gustave F. Touchard, holders of the eastern title. John Strachan and Clarence Griffin, Pacific coast champions, will meet J. B. Adoue and Robert Shelton, the south's representatives. The survivors will clash tomorrow in the final match.

Byford and Burdick are conceded an excellent chance to win their way into the challenge series.

HOW CLUBS PLAY TODAY

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 5.—In the game here today between Nashville and Birmingham the batteries will be:

Nashville, Boland and Gibson; Birmingham, Scaugh and Mayer. he weather is fair.

The London (England) Trotting club was recently formed for the purpose of encouraging the breeding of trotting horses and today's improvement of the mthends of racing in that country were present.

FEW LOOKOUT PLAYERS ARE LIKELY TO GO UP

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 5.—The doleful slump through which the Lookouts have just passed, but which is hoped to have been completely overcome after the Barons were defeated in two out of four contests on their home lot, has undoubtedly injured the sale of players upon the part of the magnates of the local club.

Thirty days ago it appeared that Coveleskie, Sommers, Street and Flick would all be sold at a handsome figure, but the poor showing of the club on the road trip which has played no little havoc with the individual record of the local stars, has prevented a consummation of any of the sales up to date.

From present indications Coveleskie alone will be disposed of to a major league club and the number of games that the Pole has lost through no fault of his own will greatly detract from his price. The Hun has undoubtedly hurled the greatest brand of ball in the league, but the dearth of hitting behind him has proved generally fatal.

Gabby Street may go up because of his responsibility for Coveleskie's success, but unless as a battery mate of the Pole, Charles does not seem slated for a major league berth. This in spite of the fact that he is catching as great a game of ball as ever in his career. Gabby's hitting has fallen down, but it is due to overwork pure and simple. Street worked in three of the Birmingham games after he had been advised not to do so. Gabby is greatly run down and twenty pounds under weight.

Flick's chances just at present seem no brighter for a major league berth than any other member's on the club. His injury to Elberfeld and Easton's downfall will prove extremely expensive to the local club owners.

Holland's Hit At Right Time Beat Lookouts

Elliott Dent Hurled Good Ball All the Way, One of the Runs Charged Against Him Coming On an Error

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 5.—Harry Holland did the work on yesterday when he returned to the old time form which he used to show in the Georgia Tech series, and cracked a single to left pushing two runners across the plate and thereby breaking Chattanooga's hold on the game.

Up to that time the Lookouts had the game by a 2 to 1 score. Atlanta's only score had come in the third when Dunn singled, Dent was out a bunt and went to second when Dunn was forced to third on Long's bunt. Welchonce's double scored the run.

Street scored Chattanooga's first tally on a series of weird heaves. He stole second and when Dunn's throw went by Smith, he promptly went to third, and when Welchonce's throw to third was bad he continued his perambulations to the home plate.

Chattanooga broke the tie in the seventh when King poked one past short by a narrow margin, Graff sacrificed and Williams stung one to center.

Then, in the eighth the Crackers got busy with their sticks and made things warm. The bases were filled by way of an opener when Agler singled, Welchonce flew out, and Smith and Bisland got on on errors. Then Holland felt the call of the wild and shot the pellet past third base, scoring two. Blalast went out to the plate on Chapman's grounder. Holland scored on a wild pitch, and Chapman scored on Dunn's single.

While the honors in offensive work went to Joe Dunn and Harry Holland to Dent belongs the burden of the defensive work. And but for the series of errors in the fifth, the local team would have had but one tally to their credit, after the seventh, he was untouchable.

Golfers Play For Two Cups

Atlanta golfers are right now mighty busy. The tournament over the East Lake course of the Atlanta Athletic club was wound up Monday when J. K. Ottley defeated K. R. Cobb for the handsome J. Carroll Payne trophy. In the thirty-six hole match Mr. McDonald came out the winner 6 up and 5 to play, showing a good form of golf all the way.

The wind up to the Payne trophy was the start of the fight for the president's trophy over the links of the Capitala club at Brookhaven. The qualifying round in the former men off Saturday and already most of the first and second rounds have been completed. The golfers in this event have taken to the game like ducks to water and each afternoon finds the course crowded.

In the Payne tournament at East Lake the second flight cup went to James L. Dickey who defeated R. H. Duncan 1 up. R. J. Jones, Jr., won the cup in the third flight when he defeated D. R. Cowles 6 up and 4 to play.

SOUTHERNERS WHO STARRED

Dode Paskert: Had an off day getting no hits and no runs out of two trials.

Al Demaree: Scored another win for the Giants by holding Pittsburg to three hits.

Bobby Byrne: Could not connect with Al's delivery and got a goose egg in three times up.

Jake Daubert: Resumed his batting clothes and cracked out two hits in four times up.

Zach Wheat: Duplicated his teammate's performance, batting .500.

Red Smith: Could not find the pill in two trials.

Jim Archer, who has been out of the game with a split finger, was put back in the game as a pinch hitter. He did not do the work.

Joe Jackson: Failed to hit in three times up.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Aug. 5.—King George, on board his cutter Brittania, won the cup today at the Cowes regatta in the Satanita cup.

The Brittannia which had not raced at Cowes for nearly fifteen years was first away on the 39 miles course and won easily. Besides King George and Queen Mary the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Prince Henry, of Prussia, brother of the German emperor were present.

NOT CALLING ANY NAMES.

Nineveh once was a pennant town
Driving on to a golden goal,
Holding each pop-eyed rival down,
Packing the park in a sardine shoal;
"Some ball town," rang the ancient din!
But you know Nineveh's berth today—
Since a certain owner came batting in
And ran the game in a certain way.

Rome once led all the major leagues—
Rome was there with the old hip-hip;
There with the stuff and the wise intrigues,
With never a chance for the game to slip;
But the crowds for a thousand years have quit
In the land where the Tiger still holds sway—
Since a certain mogul took the bit
And ran the game in a certain way.

Some game? Who can doubt it? Frank Chance, unable to beat the White Sox with the Cubs, is flaying their hide off with the Yankees. Where Tinker, Evers, Zimmerman, Brown, Archer and others couldn't come through, Ezra Midkiff, Peckenpaugh, etc., are merely romping in.

Callahan can use "Reb" Russell as often as he used to employ Walsh. But his wmnany games has Walsh won for him this season? An iron man, Mawruss, may be an iron man, y'understand, but the answer is something else again.

O, father, I hear the sound of guns;
O pray, what can it be?"
"It's the great Zim back in the lineup, kid,"
The father answered he.

"O, father, I hear an awful roar;
Pray tip me to the frame?"
But the old pap answered never a word,
For Zim was out of the game.

We made an attempt to trade our left mitt for Jimmy Archer's right one, but called the deal off when James insisted that we throw in one ear and a brace of toes. We figured the deal should be on the basis of an even trade, as expert measurements showed that only 11 per cent of either mitt was intact.

The next time Rube Benton attempts to strike out a street car with a motorcycle he will probably use a slow curve rather than a straight fast one down the middle of the track.

Just as America's luck would have it, Vardon and Ray arrive for an invasion of this country at the precise moment when we can only swing a club with one hand. Which leaves it up to only McDermott, Smith, McNamara, Brady and several others only capable of averaging 70s.

SLIDING INTO FIRST BASE IS NO HELP, CLAIMS RUDDY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 5.—The ukase recently issued by President Clivington, of the American association, upholding the unwritten law which is alleged to exist among umpires in regard to runners sliding into the initial cushion, has been the subject of nation-wide comment, various sribes arguing in favor of and against the runner being called out for his act. It might be interesting to fans south of the Mason and Dixon lines, however, to know that the unwritten law in question was first conceived of in this burg, and that Frank Rudderham is the arbiter who was the center of dissemination.

Along in the early days of the 1912 season Ruddy, Otto Jordan and Roy Moran were exchanging observations here in a downtown billiard hall while the elements were in possession of the ball lot. At that time Roy and Jimmy Johnston were running neck and neck for the base stealing honors of Father Kavanaugh's circuit and the local left fielder was taking all sort of desperate chances. He was hitting the dirt upon going into first as well as when striving for the other cushions.

It happened that upon the day before Rudderham had called Moran out at the initial cushion on a close one and during the conversation Moran mentioned the play in a joking way. It was then that the present unwritten law was first conceived.

"I always call them out when they hit the dirt at first on close ones," said Ruddy, "because a man by sliding shows that he is beaten by the ball, and is merely trying to make the decision hard. In such cases I allow the player's act in sliding to automatically call him out.

"This may seem strange to the fans," concluded Ruddy, "but every player knows that he loses an entire step in sliding feet first and if this is the case what motive can he have for hitting the dirt except to show up the umpire and put hi min Dutch?"

Cross to Box Mexican Star

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5.—Leach Cross and Joe Rivers have been matched for a twenty-round bout on Labor day at the Vernon arena. It is a part of the present plan to have the winner of the Cross-Rivers match meet Willie Ritchie on Thanksgiving day provided the champion retains his title on Labor day.

Ritchie has been offered matches on Labor day with Tommy Murphy at San Francisco and Freddie Welsh at Victoria, B. C. He has not decided which offer to accept.

Donaldson Lowers The Sprinting Record

MANCHESTER, England, Aug. 5.—At a professional athletic meeting here, Jack Donaldson, of Australia, world's champion sprinter, broke the 300-yard running record made by H. Hutchins, doing the distance in 29 3-4 seconds. Hutchins' time was 30 seconds and had stood since 1884.

G. Cummings did the mile walk in 6 minutes 23 seconds, which beats the amateur record of 6 minutes 25 4-5 seconds made at Toronto June 4, 1910, by George Goulding, and equals the professional record of W. Perkins, of England, made in 1874.

NINTH VICTIM OF MOTORCYCLE CRASH.

Fishing Club Goes Nicely

A meeting of several of the bait and fly casting enthusiasts among the Atlanta anglers was held at Yancy Hardware company, on Peachtree street Friday night. The idea of forming a club in Atlanta for the furthering of the fishing sport, especially the more scientific branch of fly and bait casting, was taken up. All interested will be seen at once and their co-operation asked.

The club would be a great thing for the city. With two such lakes as Piedmont and Lakewood it would be easy enough to hold contests and tournaments in bait and fly casting. All that is necessary is a circular floating target at which the anglers may make their cast. In the regular tournaments the target is ringed off like any other target and judges compute the percentage of perfection of the contestants. The casts are made at a distance of 60, 70, 80, 90 and 100 feet.

Messrs. Watson, of Yancy Hardware company, and Foogle, of the city, have the matter in hand and next Tuesday night at 8:30 another meeting at the same place will be held. A large number of men interested have been notified and are expected to be on hand.

With the club formally organized, the city officials will be asked for permission to use the lakes and the government will be called upon to stock them with game fish.

The sport is very popular in many places. In Columbus, Ohio, there will be a big tournament for the state championship in bait and fly casting. Over $2,000 will be given away in prizes.

Atlantians will certainly become interested as soon as some of these contests and tournaments are pulled off, which will be as soon as the club gets started.

Valdosta Gets Series Over Americus Team

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

VALDOSTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—Valdosta took the third game of the series from Americus this afternoon, 7 to 4, making two out of three for the locals. The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of the locals and by Griffin and Chancey for the visitors. Griffin and Crancey got all five of Americus' hits. One of Chancey's was for a long homer over the fence.

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.
Americus	200 000 110	4	4
Valdosta	102 033 00*	7	15

Featureless Racing At Kalamazoo Track

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 5.—Featureless racing marked the opening here of the week's Grand Circuit program. The three events decided were won in straight heats without much of a contest at any stage.

The best time of the day was made in the second heat of the 2:08 pace, in which Cabel, without urging, stepped the mile in 2:05 1-4.

Cheeny, in the 2:07 trot, and Strathstorm, in the 2:15 pace, had little opposition.

The 2:16 trot was postponed until later in the week.

Mike and Ike Baseball Bugs

Mike and Ike have appeared in person at The Journal office and pulled a stunt which belongs in the comic. The picture of the fan which was run in Friday's Journal, and which was taken at Thursday's game, was productive of two requests for tickets.

The first was Clarence (Mike) Whidley, of 310 Ormond street, who was very much of the same visage and general appearance of the cut, and who, therefore received his ticket to Saturday's game. The second was Bluford (Ike) Spurlock, of 49 East Georgia avenue, who was the exact replica of the picture of the fan, and who was the real poser for the photograph. He was unquestionably identified as the right man, and his double Mike had walked off with the candy. He, however, received a ticket also.

MONEY TO

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

The Free Farmer's Congress At Auburn, Alabama

EVERY year during the first week in August there is conducted at Auburn, Ala., what is known as a Free Farmers' congress. For a small amount of money, which the agricultural college of Auburn sets aside, they secure the very best talent possible to make speeches every hour during the day and evening for ten days, and there is usually an attendance of 1,000 to 1,500 of the best farmers in Alabama who attend these meetings. It is surprising how much interest is manifested and shown at these meetings and the good they are doing for the state of Alabama. Some of the very best class of farmers and people in the state come hundreds of miles and spend the entire ten days to gain knowledge connected with these annual gatherings, and they certainly do learn much from the information they receive at these meetings that helps them for years afterward in successfully operating their farms. They get a world of knowledge at a small expense that they could not secure otherwise. On the other hand, they have an opportunity to visit the experiment station and agricultural college and see what the state is doing.

For the past ten years these annual meetings have been conducted, and they have probably done more for the amount of money invested in them than any work that has been done in the state of Alabama. Lectures extending one and two hours by the very best talent are imparting knowledge to hundreds of the farmers who attend these meetings. Demonstrations in judging live stock and poultry, and the selection of seed, and many other things are had during these meetings, and it is surprising to see how much interest is manifested by the farmers and how the attendance has increased every year, which shows conclusively that they want this line of work conducted and that they are receiving good from it.

Another thing connected with this work is an excursion which is usually had to Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, and those who attend have an opportunity to visit this institution and see what Booker T. Washington is doing for his race. No one can realize what he is worth to the country until they make a personal inspection of his school and see how he is conducting it and the good he is doing for his race. A large number of the attendants at these meetings take advantage of this opportunity and visit Tuskegee institute during their visit to Auburn.

Reduced railroad rates and low hotel rates are secured for the entire ten days, and for the expense of not over $10 to $15 any one has an opportunity to gain a world of knowledge that they would not have the chance of knowing had they not attended these meetings. Dr. C. C. Carey, of Auburn, who is at the head of this institutional work, has done much for his state, and today Alabama is certainly making rapid strides in improved agriculture; and especially in live stock raising is this state pushing ahead of any other of the southern states, and Dr. Carey deserves much credit for this splendid work that he is so successfully conducting. A great many people, even from outside the state, attend these meetings and gain much knowledge and information from doing so. Quite a number of people from Georgia attended the meetings, the dates of same being from the 1st to the 12th of August.

A large free barbecue will be conducted on the 8th, and this, of course, is one feature that brings a large crowd, especially from the immediate home territory. Every one in the little town and the adjoining country takes considerable interest in these meetings, and leaves nothing undone in his power to make the day pleasant and instructive for all those who attend. It is the cheapest and best way by which a lot of knowledge can be imparted to a large number of people so easily and at so small an expense. The promoters of this line of work deserve much credit and praise for the efforts they have made in behalf of the agricultural interests of the state of Alabama.

REAL HOME PLACES.

Every REAL HOME-SEEKER (by that we mean a person who is not satisfied with a house on a lure lot 50x100 feet, which is the average city lot), who wants a comfortable home on a big, nicely shaded lot, say 100x200 feet in size, one that is large enough for a nice garden, plenty of room for a cow, chickens, or anything in the world the owner wants.

As a rule this is what the REAL HOME-SEEKER wants.

He finds this sort of a place once in a while. It is usually a long way out from town and the price is such, as a rule, that decides this problem for him; that is—sends him back to his 50x100 feet lot.

We have several places that would please this sort of person. Just off Stewart avenue, only 15 minutes' ride from town, convenient to both Stewart avenue and West End car lines; new city schools and large city park, we have a new six-room cottage, on lot 50x200. The lot next to it is 50x200, which can be bought for $900; the bungalow for $3,750, on reasonable terms. This gives you as nice a home place as you could wish for, 100x200 feet by size, for about $4,500.

We also offer, just off East Lake drive, on the South Decatur car line, only 20 minutes' ride from town, a new 7-room bungalow, situated in a pretty pine grove, on lot 100x200 feet. This can be bought for $5,000; reasonable terms.

If you want a REAL HOME place in the right section, at the right price, the above places would interest you.

CHINESE REBELLION IS ALMOST SUPPRESESD

Revolutionists Fall Before Federalists and Canton Is Celebrating—Treasury Looted

HONG KONG, China, Aug. 5.—The southern Chinese rebellion has been practically suppressed. Canton is celebrating the ending of the uprising.

It is said General Lung Chi-Kuang, various commander of the government troops from Kwang-Si, has been appointed governor general of Kwang-Tung.

The rebel governor, Chang, of Kwang-Tung, who said at the beginning of the revolutionary movement that he disapproved of the independent policy of the southern states. He shot his two military advisers, Chan Chung-Ying and Wang Shih-Sun, and an army officer, as he suspected them of intrigue.

The artillerymen of Canton killed their lieutenant colonel and then marched to the governor's offices, where they looted the treasury. One of the shells fired by the artillerymen fell in the prefect's offices and killed twelve persons.

Fighting continues along the West river, where the rebels have captured a gunboat.

The chief problem of the authorities is the suppression of looters.

CATHOLIC PASTOR GOES TO N. ORLEANS FROM MACON

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.
MACON, Ga., Aug. 5.—Rev. Thomas D. Madden, for six years pastor of St. Joseph Catholic church, left today for New Orleans, where he will take charge of the largest Catholic church in that city. Father Brown, assistant pastor of the church, left with Rev. Mr. Madden to act as his assistant in the work in New Orleans.

The Rev. Mr. Frankhauser will succeed the Rev. Mr. Madden as pastor, and the Rev. Mr. Murphy will assist him in his duties.

RETIRED ARMY OFFICERS WILL GET NO MILITIA COIN

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Retired army officers and enlisted men serving with the organized militia of the several states, will not receive any of the $5,-000,000 annually appropriated by the federal government for the militia. They will get only their retired pay as officers and men of the regular army, according to a decision today by the comptroller of the treasury. The order affects only retired regulars, who also are members of the militia.

The comptroller expressed some doubt whether a regular army officer should also be an officer of the state militia, because the claims of the United States on his services are paramount to those of the state. He did not decide that question, however.

only a government constitutionally set up will be recognized by the United States.

HUERTA MUST RESIGN.

This will involve the resignation of Provisional President Huerta in favor of a provisional president selected by the Mexican factions, the new president to be first appointed minister of foreign relations in conformity with the law of succession in Mexico.

It is pointed out in administration circles that while Mr. Lind's position now is that of adviser to the American embassy, he will act in reality as an unofficial ambassador, to be named ambassador when a stable government is organized and recognition is extended by the United States.

Just what part Mr. Lind will take in peace negotiations is not made clear here, but there is every reason to believe that he merely will represent the views of the American government to those who consult him and will not directly interfere with the progress of events, unless the Washington government finally decides to mediate the dispute.

Former Governor Lind may take passage from Galveston on Vera Cruz on the battleship New Hampshire, one of the ships of the gulf patrol, if he desires to do so. The navy department has not yet been asked to provide a ship, but it prepared to on account of the demoralized condition of rail traffic on the overland route to Mexico.

DE FACTO AMBASSADOR.

While Mr. Lind goes without credentials, he practically will exercise the functions of a de facto ambassador. Officials here will await with much interest the tenor of the reception to Mr. Lindo in the Mexican capital.

Meanwhile the Mexican situation, so far as Washington is concerned, seems to be a waiting one.

REPUBLICANS BACK WILSON.

President Wilson has been unofficially informed of the support of Republicans of the house in his Mexican program, so long as a non-partisan attitude is maintained. Assurances to the president were conveyed from Republican Leader Mann. At both ends of the capitol there have been informal arrangements to keep the Mexican question out of politics.

Brito Hearing Put Off Until Aug. 13

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 5.—The hearing of habeas corpus proceedings in behalf of Emmanuel Castillo Brito, former governor of the Mexican state of Campeche, held here on charges of murder and robery in Mexico, today was postponed until August 13.

Brito was arrested on a request from the present administration in Mexico, and, because of the delicate situation as regards the relationship of the United States and Mexico just now, the case has attracted wide itnerest in the Central American colony here.

General Porfirio Diaz Is Still in Paris

TAX BILL DELAYED BY HOUSE WRANGLING

Representatives Attempted to Override Rules Committee to Favor Own Bills

The house was thrown into an uproar Tuesday morning when two separate efforts were made to override the report of the rules committee and place at the head of the calendar two bills and a resolution.

For nearly two hours the debate was kept up with the result that the administration measures, amendatory to the general tax act were not reached until 12 o'clock. There was no way in which to stave off the delay. Both amendments were lost.

The first of Representative A. S. F Stovall, of Elbert, was to place the inheritance tax bill at the top of the calendar, ahead of all bills reported by the rules committee. Representative C R. McCrory, of Schley, also attempted to have his school book resolution and school book bill placed on the committee's report.

On the aye and nay vote the McCrory amendment was defeated, 87 to 81, and that of Mr. Stovall 118 to 32.

On the adoption of the report the vote was 121 to 4.

ALL ROME REJOICING; CAN BUY CIGARS ON SUNDAY

ROME, Ga., Aug. 5.—The Sunday "lid" was absent for the first time in many months in Rome yesterday when all of the drug stores operated their soda founts. Blue Sunday laws have been rigorously enforced for the past three or four years, and for a time it was impossible to buy a cigar or a magazine, but the tension has gradually relaxed, and one bold pharmacist finally began to operate his fount.

The innovation proved immensely popular during the hot summer days, and last Sunday all of the local druggists followed the example of their pioneer brother, with the result that the people on their way to and from church services found it possible to indulge their wicked propensities to the extent of a cold drink or a cigar.

MANY DIVORCE SUITS IN MUSCOGEE COUNTY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 5.—The Muscogee superior court is in session this week with a very light calendar before it, composed largely of divorce cases. The grand jury was organized yesterday with the naming of G. O. Berry as foreman and was charged by Judge Gilbert along the usual statutory lines. Among the numerous divorce cases to come up is one of an unusual nature, it being that of Dr. W. L. Cooke, a prominent physician, who is seeking a divorce from his wife, claiming in his petition Charles D. Hunt, Jr., as corespondent. Owng to the prominence of all parties to the suit, the case is attracting widespread interest. It is expected to be called Wednesday morning.

BOLL WEEVIL SPREADING SAY GOVERNMENT EXPERTS

Plan of Quarantining Large Area Has Been Abandoned

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—As the result of conferences between representatives from the cotton-growing states and experts of the department of agri-culture it was announced today that practically no change would be made in the present plan of campaign against the cotton boll weevil. Extension of the present methods of improved culture, it was decided, offered the best means of combating the spread and increase of the pest.

Many plans for the eradication of the weevil had been offered. The pest is said to be slowly widening its zone of activity, and to threaten states not heretofore invaded to any great extent.

One plan was to establish a quarantine strip of country, several miles in width and running through several states, on which cotton would not be planted for one and possibly two seasons. In this way it was hoped to check the spread of the insect and permit concentration in fighting it. The cost of the plan, however, was found to be practically prohibitive, while experts were not agreed on its efficacy.

BROOKS FIRST BALE BRINGS GOOD PRICE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
QUITMAN, Ga., Aug. 5.—Brooks county's first bale of cotton reached town this morning. It was raised by W. L. Harris, of the Barney district, weighed 485 pounds, was classed as shy good middling and was bought by M. L. Brantley for 15 cents per pound. The cotton crop is about one-fourth off in this section, but other crops will produce good results.

NAVY'S BEST FIGHTERS WOULD "TAKE" NEW YORK

Fleet Prepares to "Storm" Long Island Fortifications, To Keep Result Secret

(By Associated Press.)
NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 5.—Eleven gray battleships, the most powerful fighting craft in the United States navy, steamed out of Narragansett Bay today bent on the theoretical destruction of fortifications guarding Long Island sound. The purpose was to open the way to the ultimate occupation of New York City.

Low hanging clouds helped to conceal the fleet's movement from the army manning coast defenses along the sound.

About 13,000 officers and men of the navy are engaged. The real test, however, is for the army in its work of defense. Decisions of the umpires will not be made public.
